

Art at OPB this month

COURTESY PHOTO

'De Javu' is among the art by Jane Connelley on display this month at OPB.

Jane Connelley is the featured artist for June in the lobby area of Oregon Pacific Bank in Florence.

"I've arrived at a place in my creative journey that I love to share. It's spontaneous, serendipitous and extremely gratifying," said Connelley. "I begin each piece with observation and planning, but then go to work with a more flexible attitude that allows for spontaneity and visual surprises."

Connelley's work has been described as "realism with unrealistic departures." She lives and works near the ocean, with pure light and constant inspiration.

"I like to think my recent work is infused with the serenity I feel here," said Connelley, who is a member of Florence Regional Arts Alliance (FRAA), the Florence Events Center Gallery Committee and an art teacher who has worked with local middle school students during a six week art class sponsored by Lane Arts Council.

SIUSLAW VALLEY FIRE & RESCUE

You don't have a choice

What happens when you have a "bubbling" plumbing issue on Saturday evening, when your first baby shower looms the next morning?

Most likely, you'll frantically go straight into a full-blown panic mode.

The stress level has peaked! What are you going to do so your baby shower isn't ruined?

Your mind is initially churning with unanswered questions; You're hoping once the plumber arrives (You just know they are rushing to get there at 11:30 p.m.), they're legitimate and have proper insurance. And hopefully they know what they are doing and you'll be billed fairly.

On the flip side, what if you need help and, depending on the type of emergency (medical, emergency/non-emergency or public assistance), you only have one choice when you require emergency services to come to your aid.

How does that make you feel? You have no other choice... think about it. There's no other option than the one which is at your fingertips with the numbers 911.

This may be a life or death situation. Consequently, maybe it's your entire life's savings, priceless mementoes or just peace of mind which needs rapid intervention.

You pay hard-earned money towards taxes, so you expect and have the right to have professional people there to help. This is your right and you're relying on people to make things ultimately better.

This is where all the training and hours spent learning is crucial to the outcome. Your emergency services respond because they are committed to their community and it's a job which gives them satisfaction.

They are here for you when you need them most. So, yes...count on them to respond accordingly and give you the best services that you expect.

They wouldn't want it any other way. We are here for you!

Now, about that "bubbling" issue...

Pete "Boa" Warren can be contacted at 541-997-3212, or the main SVFR station, 2625 Highway 101, or email Boa@svfr.org.
