'Field Day' emergency excersize held

MARK BRENNAN/SIUSLAW NEWS

Field Day 2017 was a rousing success for the Central Oregon Coast Amateur Radio Club. Every year the Club is one of over 2700 groups throughout the US and Canada who set up emergency radio stations, complete with tents and antennas, and keep their radios on the air for 24 straight hours. This year the Club set up 5 different types of amateur radio stations in the wilds of Sutton Campground. All stations were powered by solar power, batteries and emergency generators to simulate the power grid being down during a disaster. Experience around the world has shown that in the event of an earthquake or tsunami, the first things to be wiped out are telephones, cell phones and the internet. Field Day is practice for the Club members in setting up their radio stations from scratch and using emergency power to be able to communicate on behalf of the cities of Florence, Dunes City and Mapleton with the rest of Lane County – and with the rest of the world. The exercise lasted 24 hours, round the clock, because if there is a disaster, normal communications will not be restored for days, weeks or even months.

Join Payne and Favro as they sketch the line from Seeger's passion for social justice issues (labor, war, civil rights, and the environment) to the music the iconic musician inspired.

Never has Seeger's message been more relevant and through slides, stories and songs, listeners will see why.

Learn the back stories behind Seeger's famous tunes and sing along with popular songs like; "Where Have All the Flowers Gone?," "Puff the
