ambulance district on personal and professional levels.

Kreitz was visibly moved as he added his personal reflections of Stonelake and was joined in a hearty round of applause for the former board member from all in attendance.

Farnsworth was sworn in following Stonelake's recognition ceremony.

In his chief director's report, Langborg discussed several items.

Most notably, he urged the board to authorize the purchase of new administrative software sold by Board Portal and to retain the services of Emergency Services Consulting International (ESCI) to facilitate the district's strategic plan for the future.

Board members briefly discussed the issues and passed them unanimously, with the plan to attend an initial training on the use of the new software on Oct. 27.

The board also approved documents pertaining to a new subcommittee's guidelines and process improvement forms for the intergovernmental agreement (IGA) with Siuslaw Valley Fire and Rescue to share administrative services.

Western Lane appointed directors Farnsworth and Cindy Russell to serve on the "as needed" IGA panel.

During last week's Siuslaw Valley meeting, directors John Carnahan and Ned Hickson volunteered to be the other members of the subcommittee.

Langborg also provided an update to the construction timeline to be undertaken relating to the improvements financed by a seismic grant received by the district.

The first location included in the grant will be the Western Lane Ambulance District Office.

"They are doing a lot of preliminary work now that needs to be done," Langborg said. "They are going to the planning department at the city and they feel that we can expect to see construction begin in the November time frame, starting at this station, because they know that this our primary focus. We want to begin protecting our rescue equipment as soon as possible."

During the remainder of the meeting, the board approved the administrative report, updated the district personal device policy and authorized payment of the district's monthly bills.

Western Lane and Siuslaw Valley will be holding a public meeting on Friday, Oct. 27, at 10 a.m. to discuss the organizations' strategic plans and their IGA Implementation Plan. The workshop will be held at the Main Fire Station, 2625 Highway 101.
