Jatunn Gibson, PhD

Jatunn Gibson, PhD, Aging in Place Manager for Habitat for Humanity International, has over 25 years of experience in healthcare. She has worked in various roles to implement and evaluate programs in academic and community settings. These programs focused on the health of the aging population and their caregivers as well as direct patient care for 15 years. In her previous role as Assistant Professor in Gerontology and Assistant Director of Family and Consumer Sciences, she had statewide responsibilities for community health and program planning. In her current role with Habitat, Jatunn is responsible for both setting and implementing the program's strategy for Aging in Place. Aging in Place is a holistic approach where Habitat collaborates with other organizations to meet older adults' priorities by providing products and services to foster safe, livable homes and communities to improve the quality of life for older adults. Jatunn maintains her certification as a Master Certified Health Education Specialist (MCHES) and membership in many aging-focused organizations.
