Study What You Love—Entrepreneurship As The Path To Success And Fulfillment

(NAPSA)—The United States has long been considered a leader in entrepreneurial pursuits, with everyone from ambitious self-starters to certified moguls making their way here from around the globe to transform dreams into realities. According to the Global Entrepreneurship Development Institute, the United States provides the best environment for cultivating entrepreneurship, ranking first out of 138 countries.

On the flip side, however, first-time business owners have only an 18 percent chance of succeeding.

So how to bridge the gap between the dreamers and the triumphant? If you're a student looking for a way to make your passion into your career, you may be glad to learn there's a college program that can put you on the right path, while also providing you with a classic liberal arts education. The new Entrepreneurship minor course of study at Pennsylvania's Lycoming College provides a modern approach to a liberal arts education, while preparing students to start a company of their own, to work for another entrepreneurial company or to be more entrepreneurial within a larger company.

The program is headed by Marshall D. Welch III, the Slater Endowed Chair in Entrepreneurship at Lycoming College, who is an accomplished entrepreneur with extensive experience advising and managing organizations, merger integration and emerging growth companies. He also approaches entrepreneurship differently from others. Welch believes that entrepreneurship, at its core, is finding and creating value, and that studying entrepreneurship as an academic discipline helps students learn to be innovative in whatever field they ultimately pursue.

In less than one year, Lycoming College's entrepreneurship classes have become a sought-after, valued addition to many students' class schedules. The program is built on the notion that any student's core education, regardless of academic major, can be augmented with the practical knowledge and skills necessary to take a business idea to fruition, such as innovation, digital marketing, intellectual property and financial skills.

College students can learn to run their own businesses while still benefiting from a liberal arts education.

"My No. 1 objective is to create a world-class experience for students by joining the liberal arts with entrepreneurship," said Welch. "I believe that the core knowledge of any entrepreneur is first his or her primary field of study, whether that is biology, archaeology, music or any of the other majors at Lycoming. Then add the practical knowledge and skills necessary to help our students become successful entrepreneurs or even work for entrepreneurial companies."

Firmly grounded in the liberal arts, the College has modernized its approach to higher education by offering courses that better prepare students for the 21st century.

Still in its infancy, the program is already attracting well-known speakers to campus. Jay Ducote, celebrity chef and restaurateur, who has appeared on Food Network and Travel Channel, recently lectured to the College community on how he followed his passion and took risks on his road to success.

"Lycoming is resolute in its mission to offer students a 21st-century education, and I believe our entrepreneurship offerings are an important part of that charge. Thinking deeply and making bold decisions to do something the world has never seen, while also staying true to your passions, accurately describes the students at this institution—a truth that also closely aligns with the principles of entrepreneurship," said Welch.

Making Life Better

Hot Tips For Outdoor Entertaining With Hard Cider

Presented by Angry Orchard
(NAPSA)—Outdoor dining is essential when the weather is warm. One way to elevate your backyard barbecue is to serve crisp and refreshing hard cider. Hard cider's natural, apple-forward taste complements a variety of cuisines. It can calm the heat of spicy dishes and bring out the rich flavor of savory, barbecued meat, salty seafood and sharp cheeses.

Two popular varieties from Angry Orchard, the No. 1-selling hard cider in the country, are Angry Orchard Crisp Apple and new Angry Orchard Rosé. Crisp Apple is bright and fruit forward, like biting into a fresh apple. Made with two apples in every bottle, Crisp Apple is available in six-packs as well as 12-oz. and 16-oz. cans. Another cider perfect for alfresco dining is Angry Orchard Rosé. Available in six-packs, Rosé is crafted with a delicious blend of apples, including rare red-flesh apples from France, that delivers the crisp and refreshing qualities of cider with a rosy hue and floral aroma.

Enjoy these styles from the bottle or incorporated into delicious dishes, such as Cider-Braised Clams. This recipe pairs naturally with cider and a variety of bites, making it the ideal meal for summer entertaining.

Cider-Braised Clams
Serves 2 as an appetizer

- 1 bottle Angry Orchard Crisp Apple
- 1 cup kosher salt
- 2 littleneck clams
- 1 green delicious apple, peeled and diced
- 1 Tablespoon fresh thyme
- 3/4 cup crème fraiche
- Pepper, to taste
- 4 thick slices ciabatta
- 2 Tablespoons olive oil
- Dissolve salt in 1 gallon cold water. Soak clams in salted water for 30 minutes. Lift out of water and set aside. Preheat grill to medium. Create a double-layer packet with aluminum foil. Place clams in packet and pour cider over. Close packet tightly and place on grill for 10-15 minutes or until clams open. Remove clams from packet, place them in a bowl, and pour liquid into small saucepan. In saucepan on the grill, whisk crème fraiche into broth and season to taste with pepper. Keep warm. Brush bread with olive oil and grill until charred on both sides. Pour broth over clams and toss gently with apple and thyme leaves. Serve with grilled bread; enjoy.

Enjoy the dish and elevate your celebration with this refreshing hard cider cocktail:

- Orchard Rosé Sangria
- 2 bottles Angry Orchard Rosé
 - 3 oz. gin
 - 3 oz. lemon juice
 - 3 oz. simple syrup (1 part sugar to 1 part water)
 - 9 oz. basil watermelon juice (add about 2 cups diced watermelon and 5 to 6 basil leaves to a blender and blend until liquefied)

Build in a wineglass with ice and top with cider. Garnish with an orange twist.
