The annual "OddUmm" art exhibit at the Florence Events Center features a multitude of art pieces.

FEC invites artists to submit to fall exhibit

The Florence Events Center (FEC) Gallery Committee invites artists to submit artwork, including 3-D and photography, for an October "OddUmm" exhibit that is both seasonal and unusual.

Fall lends itself to great artistic opportunities, including beautiful autumn colors, the fall harvest, and wildlife preparing for winter as well as scarecrows, ghosts in anticipation of Halloween.

Applications are available by visiting the FEC website at EventCenter.org or pick one up at the FEC office during regular business hours.

Cost is $20 per rod for up to three pieces (depending on size of art pieces), or up to three pieces of 3-D art for display in the glass case.

Application deadline for submissions is August 20.

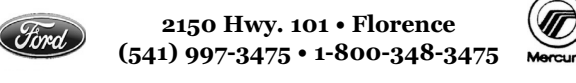

The community is invited to attend the Artist Reception on Friday, Sept. 13 from 5 to 7 p.m.

Winter Music Fest tickets on sale now

Nine high-caliber groups will heat up the Florence Events Center on Jan. 24, 25 and 26, 2020, with bluegrass, new and traditional folk, and Americana during the 18th annual Florence Winter Music Festival.

Those who plan ahead can save $10 on two- and three-day passes through today, Aug. 14. Discounted tickets are on sale in two waves, with the biggest discount available through today.

Prices increase slightly until Sept. 20, then increase to full price on Sept. 21.

A complete festival overview, with artist profiles and early ticket discounts, is available at WinterMusicFestival.org.

The weekend also offers the free Florence Regional Arts Alliance Winter Arts Festival — a show and sale with demonstrations by more than 20 renowned local and regional artists and craftspeople with two- and three-dimensional art, personal care items, edibles, and adult potables.

New this year will be workshops by the performers on songwriting, guitar skills, and jamming (separate admission for non-concertgoers).

Free, dedicated onsite jamming space is available beginning at noon on Friday and 1 p.m. on both Saturday and Sunday.

The musical lineup includes festival headliner Livingston Taylor, who blends a range of musical genres — folk, pop, gospel, jazz — fusing it with upbeat storytelling and hit songs he's written for his brother James.

Bluegrass Friday features Canadian mandolin master John Reischman and the Jaybirds, and Grammy and IBMA award-winner Kathy Kallick with her band.

Americana Saturday features the blues/rock/folk blend of Mr. & Mrs. Something, Nashville's sought-after guitarist Jim Hurst, and the multi-award-winning country/folk/bluegrass music of the Greg Blake Band.

Saturday evening's opening act (7 p.m.) is Circus No. 9, a hot new band that represents everything that's good about the new generation of acoustic music, blurring the lines between bluegrass, jazz, and rock — followed by headliner Livingston Taylor at 8:30 p.m.

Sunday afternoon brings the wildly creative Tyler Stenson, twice-named Portland's performer-songwriter of the year, with his "elegant folk" as heard on SiriusXM's Coffee House, followed by festival favorite True North's Kristen Grainger and Dan Wetzel.

The Florence Winter Music Festival is produced by the nonprofit Friends of the Florence Events Center, a volunteer organization that helps fund capital improvements and performance grants at the venue.

Heritage Players to attend next Genealogy Society meeting

Members of the volunteer staff and the John Quay Heritage Players will inform and delight members of the Siuslaw Genealogy Society on Wednesday, Sept. 18, at 7 p.m. at the Siuslaw Pioneer Museum.

Museum Curator Pete Shoys, Sandy Zinn and other library volunteers will speak about the Kyle Research Library division of the museum.

The library houses more than 1200 books and research files on every subject of concern to Florence researchers and pioneer descendants.

The volunteers have also produced several booklets relating to area history and the early settlers which are available at the museum.

The artifact inventorying program "Past Perfect" is used by the curator and volunteers in cataloging and photographing artifacts.

They will explain the advantages and usefulness of this program in their work.

The meeting will begin with re-enactments of scenes from the life of selected early settlers by several members of the John Quay Heritage Players.

The Players research their characters and reveal realistic incidents from the history of their chosen counterpart.

Individuals do not need to be a member to attend. More information is available at www.siuslawgenealogy.org.

The Siuslaw Pioneer Museum is located at 278 Maple Street.
