Making Life Better

Ticket To Work Helps People Regain Independence
(NAPS)—Millions of Americans get Social Security disability benefits yet want to work. They may be glad to know about a federal program that can help them enter the workforce while maintaining access to benefits. Thanks to Social Security's Ticket to Work program, free employment support services help people prepare for work, find jobs or progress in their careers.
Many of these people are concerned about what employment would mean for their Supplemental Security Income (SSI) or Social Security Disability Insurance (SSDI) benefits. There's no need to worry. Social Security Work Incentives make it easier for adults with disabilities to explore work while continuing to receive benefits. Some of these incentives make it possible for people to test their ability to work without immediately losing Medicare or Medicaid coverage. Others let people whose disability interferes with employment start receiving benefits again without needing to submit a new application under certain conditions. Because everyone's situation is different, job seekers are encouraged to talk with a professional Benefits Counselor. These are trained experts who help people make informed decisions about employment. To find one, call the Ticket to Work Help Line at 1 (866) 968-7842 or 1 (866) 833-2967 (TTY).

For example, the Ticket program helped Brenda recover the control she lost when, in 1996, she found herself in the psychiatric unit of a hospital. Brenda had experienced psychosis—a frightening symptom of an illness that causes people to lose touch with reality. The symptoms recurred, interfering with her ability to maintain steady work. Still, Brenda studied human services in college and after many years, found effective treatment.
She wanted to return to work, so when information about Ticket to Work came in the mail, Brenda connected with a provider who offered the support she needed.
With career counseling, résumé help, job leads and a lot of encouragement, Brenda landed a job as a Community Rehabilitation worker. She applies her human service skills to helping vulnerable populations engage in the community and has recovered her sense of purpose.
"This work is not just about making money," she reflects. "It's a healthy [work] environment and I'm thriving in it. When you have the kind of support that allows you to focus on succeeding, you discover what you can do."
Ticket to Work helped Brenda find her path to a better future. It may help you find yours. To learn more, call the Ticket to Work Help Line or visit <https://choosework.ssa.gov>.

Brenda was able to resume her work helping others after being hospitalized for psychosis thanks to a special government program.

How To Scratch Head Lice Off Your List Of Worries

(NAPS)—One of the most common human parasitic infestations around, head lice affect an estimated 6-12 million Americans annually, most of them children.
If your kids are at risk, here's something you should know: Catching lice early is vital to helping stop the spread of these itchy pests.

What To Do

- Since it can take 4 to 6 weeks for symptoms such as itching to show up, it's a good idea to make weekly lice checks a habit at home to stop an infestation before it gets out of control.
- Don't share items that touch the head. Teach children to keep their hats, helmets, brushes, headbands, scarves and other items to themselves.
- When possible, have children wear long hair pulled back.
- Catch it early. If you notice your child scratching his head, do a thorough check.
- Act quickly. If you are notified of an outbreak, immediately check your child's hair, searching for nits close to the scalp or sores from scratching at the nape of the neck or behind the ears. Check all family members using a nit comb. Apply a 50/50 solution of conditioner and water to the hair to make combing easier. Work under bright light and watch for movement. Examine the comb after each stroke.
- Don't worry and don't blame the child. Even if your kid does bring home lice, it's not the end of the world. There are affordable pesticide-free over-the-counter products that can help you treat the problem without having to spend a lot of time or money on going to a clinic.

Here's How To Handle The Problem
Treat anyone who's infested. There are more options than ever before for treating head lice, however not all products work the same. With lice growing increasingly resistant to traditional over-the-counter pesticides, look for a pesticide-free treatment that's clinically proven effective against super lice and eggs. If a product doesn't specifically say it "kills" lice and eggs, it won't. Some products are designed only to make removal combing of lice easier.

Vamousse Lice Treatment comes in a convenient mousse formula that kills lice and eggs before they hatch, while they are still in the hair. In just one application it attacks the full life cycle of adult lice and eggs so there's no waiting for the eggs to hatch and then treating again. This decreases the hassle and the risk of spreading lice throughout your family.
Once exposed to lice, it's too late for a repellent. Stray lice may have already been contracted. Nits and scurrying lice are so small that they can easily be missed during a parent's visual inspection of a child's hair. If you don't find lice but are still concerned or have just treated a child, you can switch the whole family to a daily lice defense shampoo such as Vamousse Lice Defense for two weeks. It's gentle, pesticide-free and used just like regular shampoo, yet laboratory studies have shown it can kill lice with each use.
