LCPH tracing COVID cases at local bank

According to Lane County Public Health (LCPH), recent cases of the coronavirus confirmed in Florence have been linked to a workplace outbreak at the Florence Branch of Oregon Pacific Bank.

In a release from the bank Thursday, OPB confirmed that four employees have tested positive for COVID-19.

The branch closed for a day last week in order to deep clean the facility, when the first positive test was received.

However, the branch has been closed to walk-in business since mid-November.

The origins of the four cases have not been determined and it remains unclear if the virus was spread among employees at the bank or was part of the community spread that LCPH has been tracking.

The bank is urging any members of the community who may have had extended contact with a branch employee between Jan. 4 and Jan. 14 to contact their local health provider immediately to assess the need for testing.

According to OPB President Ron Green, "The decision early on to close the branch for walk-in traffic has kept the risk of transmission between Bank employees and the public extremely low."

More information regarding the bank's statement can be found at opbc.com.

Rain creates continued slide threats around region

Last week's heavy winds and rain have produced a variety of road hazards including standing water, flooding, downed trees and powerlines.

But another major threat in the days ahead will come from rain-soaked hillsides that threaten to slide onto Oregon roads.

Even as rains let up, saturated, unstable soils remain, aggravating the potential for slides.

On Wednesday, ODOT began assessments, including aerial observations, to study the extent and nature of the threat.

The slides have been taking place in areas of the state accustomed to slides in heavy rain, including the Columbia River Gorge, rivers along the Coast Range and in the Cascades.

Visit TripCheck.com for the latest road conditions and closures.

The slide threat will be greatest on roads with steep hillsides. Here are some tips for drivers:

- Be especially alert. Bridges may be washed out, culverts overtopped and boulders may be dislodged.

- Don't drive through high water. You may not know if it's dangerously deep.

- Watch for sunken and cracked roads and leaning utility poles, trees or fences.

- Listen for unusual sounds that might indicate moving debris, such as trees cracking or boulders knocking together.

A trickle flow may precede a much larger event and slides can develop quickly.

- If near a river or creek, be alert for sudden changes in water levels or if the water changes from clear to muddy.

Such changes indicate activity upstream and you should be prepared to move quickly.

- Be especially alert in areas burned by the September 2020 wildfire, where the threat of slides is increased.

- Get away from a slide. More may be coming.

Remember, slides vary widely in size and can move at slow or very high speed depending on slope angle, water content, and type of earth and debris flow.
