homes

They prey on insects, slugs and snails. While not as closely tied to the water as frogs, they still need a moist place to live, often making their homes under boards, porches, loose rocks, and tree roots. You can provide a "toad cave" in your garden by laying a clay pot on the ground on its side, and burying the lower half in the soil, or setting a clay pot upside down on the ground, and dig the earth away from its edge in one spot, forming a small tunnel for the toad to access the inside of his new home. - Brenda Weaver

WE NEED A HOME....

others.

Hi there, my name is Grisly and I am a little over a year old. I am looking for a home that is high energy either going for several walks a day, hiking, playing at the beach, or just several hours of active playtime as I tend to chew if I become bored. I also need a home that is familiar with either Huskys or Akitas and with older children because of my energy level
