'THE FORGOTTEN MAN'

By Joel Marks Conservative Historian Special to Siuslaw News

In this strange age of stim-Lulus packages, federal infrastructure spending, illegal immigration with astonishing COVID pandemic implications, as well as a federal welfare state that is threatening to end a once fiscally sound Republic, we appeal to our better

We see no end in sight regardless of political party leadership and, frankly, this spending pandemic has been with us ever since the presidency of Franklin Delano Roosevelt, the true architect of America's welfare programs called The

New Deal. His relative Theodore Roosevelt called it the "square deal," another progressive misleading term.

Teddy and Franklin did not appreciate the Framers' restrictions on federal spending spelled out in our Constitution, but those "restrictions" were intentionally written into the formula of limited govern-Their actions said, "If the what Thomas Hobbes would the Constitution; the creator call "the Leviathan." We are now into unsustainable territory with our federal elected officials not having the will to reverse course. What is the Republic to do?

The solution for all the young energetic youth out there to do is listen to the "Forgotten Man" — Mr. James Madison.

Remember him all you high school students? Yes, he was not only the Father of the Constitution, but also the Father of the Bill of Rights. Also the hero of the Virginia Ratifying Convention; one of the main authors of the Federalist Papers interpreting the true meaning of of the Virginia Plan, which was the framework for the Constitution; and the individual who almost singlehandedly coaxed the indispensable man, George Washington, to attend the Philadelphia Convention, without which none would be held. He also wrote 50 years of letters to Thomas Jefferson, a priceless collection of history outlining the thinking behind America's formative years. Because he was the leader of the first Congress, he also passed much legislation which benefitted the American structure by working closely with our first president. Not to mention, he was also secretary

He is the one, unlike Teddy, Woodrow and Franklin, who said the general welfare clause was only meant for those things the states could not do and that which is only enumerated in the founding document. He was 5'4" and our smallest president physically, but his mind was like a steel trap and he was larger than life.

a famous Supreme Court case, of state and president, both for Butler vs. the US, which decided to disregard Mr. Madison and Mr. Jefferson's strict reading of the general welfare clause and accept Mr. Hamilton's expansive reading. We now have a federal budget tand fast therefore in the liberty by which Christ has made us free, and do not be entangled again with a yoke of bondage." — Galatians 5:1

This passage speaks to us on two levels: the state of our country and the state of our relationship with God.

In our country, today we are losing many of the basic rights that our Constitution of united independent states originally formed. As a matter of fact, people today rarely acknowledge that is clearin our Declaration of Independence and our Constitution, The United States of dom.

Our government, while granting enormous freedom with respect to moral concerns, has constantly been eroding our political independence from an elite ruling class. For example, we have the right to engage in practices that were once considered immoral; to use drugs that were once considand addictive; to use images and language in public that ly articulated in the name of was once considered porour Republic and affirmed nographic in nature. These behaviors now are acceptable all in the name of free-

However, the rights of free speech about government are being restricted. How we use personal property is regulated in all areas, parental rights about education and health have been usurped, laws have been passed in the name of "crime prevention" and "public safety" to regulate almost every aspect of our lives. As a people, we ered dangerous, destructive have never seen such control over the lives of Americans except in the case of slavery.

Just as these changes within our society have been gradual in nature and changing over many decades, for the Christian, the erosion of the passion to live like Jesus slowly fades over time as the cares and concerns of this world begin to dominate our waking moments.

As we make concessions for the sake of convenience and compromise for the sake of instant gratification, sin begins to dominate our lives again, robbing us of the joy and the sense of peace we

God gives us a reset button to start over every day, to make this day better than the last one. To find joy and peace that transcends the stress of the day and the pain of our circumstance. To give us hope knowing, that in Jesus, our future transcends the issues of the moment.

Diet Tip #4

"Using smaller plates at mealtimes can help reduce intake effortlessly.

The same amount of food will look like a full meal on small plate compared to a large plate. Eating a full plate is more satisfying and satiating and won't leave you feeling deprived."
