Pacific d Mapleton: 15-25, 13-25, 25-21, 19-25

Mapleton's volleyball team has had an action-packed week, playing a doubleheader at home against C.S. Lewis Academy and Pacific on Thursday, Aug. 26, and a tournament at C.S. Lewis this past Saturday, Aug. 26.

"We won our first game, so that's a great way to start it off!" said senior Brier Shird, who plays outside hitter for the Lady Sailors.

Senior libero Summer Flansberg said, "The rest of them have been really close, so I think we're going to have a good season this year!"

The girls are definitely having fun so far, celebrating their first win while taking their first loss in stride with positive attitudes. Coach Molly Dooley discussed her reactions after both games.

"The first one we came out and played really hard," Dooley said. "Morgan [Milbrett], one of our freshmen setters who is also our lead-off server, had three aces in a row with five aces total in that first set, which was pretty darn awesome."

It was serving that carried the Lady Sailors through, proving the importance of those fundamental skills Dooley has been working on strengthening with her girls in practice.

"We had some really strong serving in that first set, and actually, throughout the entire game we had some really strong serving, which makes me

Siuslaw soccer kicks off their season in Newport

BY ZEAHNA YOUNG
SIUSLAW NEWS

On Aug. 26, Siuslaw's soccer team played their season opener at Newport High School. It was a hard-fought game, but the Vikings succumbed to Newport late in the second half after the Cubs reached an eight-point advantage.

"We went into the game expecting a tough matchup," said Coach Londi Tomaro. "Our Varsity team had a full squad at the game; every player got minutes and contributed to the match. Although we did not score and the game ended 0-8, we did get several good chances, especially in the second half."

One major disadvantage for Siuslaw occurred about half-way through the first half of the game when goalie Kayden Lane was given a red card ejection after accidentally tripping a player in front of the goal while trying to defend. As a result, the Viks had to play almost three quarters of the game one player down, and Lane will also have to sit out of their game tonight, serving a one-game suspension.

"Although it was an unlucky play, it was an automatic red card ejection because it denied an obvious goal scoring opportunity," said Tomaro. "The kid was six yards away from the goal with an empty net, and he would have had to really flub up to miss — he could have just walked the ball into the net at that point."

"The referee came over and talked to Kayden at halftime and said he knew it was just unlucky—Kayden got beat and turned around and tried to dive for the ball, and accidentally tripped the kid. Anywhere else in the box, or even if there was a defender back there, it would have been a yellow card and penalty kick still, but he wouldn't have been ejected from the game. So, even though it wasn't a malicious foul, it's really situational."

According to Tomaro, "A lot of times, a red card is for things that are really bad — hitting somebody, kicking somebody, spitting on somebody, yelling swear words directed at a person — if you yell in frustration and swear, it's a yellow card, but if you swear at somebody, or use derogatory language at a person, then it's a red card. So, when you hear about a red card in soccer, it's usually all these really bad things, but there's also this one situational red card which is automatic, and there's no wiggle room. It just has to be an ejection."
