

Panel discussion looks at 'Human Impact on Oregon Coastal Landscapes'

The Oregon Shores Conservation Coalition will offer a free, online panel discussion of a fundamental topic in coastal conservation — the ways in which human activities have reshaped the land in our region. "Human Impact on Oregon Coastal Landscapes" will take place virtually on Thursday, Sept. 30, at 6 p.m. The event, part of a series sponsored by Oregon Shores in celebration of the group's 50th anniversary, is open to all.

For more information, and to find a registration link, go to oregonshores.org/events/panel-human-impacts-landscape.

The panel moderator will be Ernie Niemi, president of Natural Resource Economics, a consultancy in Eugene, and co-director of the Forest Carbon Coalition, a national organization that promotes climate-smart management of U.S. forests.

The speakers include:

- Scott Burns, professor emeritus of geology from Portland State University, on "Forestry Practices, Landslides, and Sediments in the Streams." Focusing on the north coast, Dr. Burns will discuss the forestry practices in the Oregon Coast Range that have many impacts on the slopes of the mountains and the sediment in the streams. He will discuss the overall impacts, especially landslides and sediment movement and their effects on fish populations.

- Paul Engelmeyer, manager of the Tenmile Creek Sanctuary for the Portland Audubon Society, chapter. Speaking on "Coastal Conservation Issues and Species of Concern," Engelmeyer will cover a range coastal issues and strategies, including protection and restoration of watersheds for the Endangered Species-listed coho salmon and the Marbled Murrelet, a seabird which nests in old-growth forests and thus depends on the health of the ocean as well as the quality of forest habitat. He will also touch on water quality in coastal watersheds.

- William G. Robbins, emeritus distinguished professor of history from Oregon State University, speaking on "Production Driven Endgames and Oregon's Coastal Environment." He will discuss how market-related values dramatically reshaped the ecology and landscapes of the coastal environment, in particular transforming watersheds.

The Sailors were on the court Thursday at Eddyville after press deadlines and will next play Thursday, Sept. 30, for their second match-up of the year with Alsea at 6 p.m.

Siuslaw d Marist 25-11, 25-17, 25-15

The Siuslaw Viking volleyball team opened Sky-Em League play on Sept. 21 with a three-game sweep of the Marist Spartans.

After taking the first set 25-11, the Vikings found themselves down 6-13 to the Spartans in game two. Siuslaw regrouped to take the lead and game, 25-17. Then they took game three 25-15 to take the match 3-0.

Hayden Muller had 33 digs and 10 perfect passes on the night. Mylee Blake had 8 kills, and Rhian-na Lane had 8 kills and 3 blocks.

"The girls just played so solid as a team tonight. Every girl who touched the floor had a strong game and overall, it was just a great team effort," said Coach

Kari Blake. "Everyone played their position well. It was nice to see things starting to fall into place and the team starting to gel, just in time for our league opener. Felt great to come home 1-0 in league for all three of our teams tonight."

Both of Siuslaw's junior varsity teams also swept Marist 3-0.

The Vikings played Marshfield at home on Thursday after press deadlines and travel to Elmira for another Sky-Em League battle on Tuesday, Sept. 28.

only recorded one snow game. Usually, we were done playing before the November play-offs began. But I did play at the College of Idaho while playing for Pacific University. The temperature was nowhere near zero and there was plenty of slipping and sliding on the cold snowy field.

The coldest I ever witnessed occurred when I played for the Pacific Menehunes flag football team. We were in the Portland league play-offs. It was the third week in November.

When I showed up to play, I was wearing sweats with my jersey over my sweatshirt to keep warm. My teammates, from Hawaii, wore only their shorts and game jerseys. They said they only play in their official uniform so I was encouraged to dress appropriately. I removed my sweats. It was cold and raining. To make me even colder, I jumped on a fumble, forgetting the ball is dead on fumbles in flag football. I was now muddy, wet and could after only two plays. Luckily, we won the game and the championship game the next week against Portland State University.

As the Vikings continue to energize the Siuslaw football nation, they will be faced with weather conditions not pleasant to play in. If their ability to overcome these conditions matches their effort against Sisters, then Viking fans need to be prepared to dress warmly in November. Get out those Viking blankets.

In the past few games, the Viks' defense has struggled with keeping the attack away from the goal, the coach said. The hope is to review the game footage to find next things to work on.

Garcia scored two goals, one in the first half and one in the second.

"We took very few shots in the first half," Tomaro said. "We had more in the second half, but most of them went wide or high. Senior Kayden Lane started in the goal but left the game with an injury after a collision in the box; he made seven saves and allowed five goals. Sophomore Derrick Vanduch finished out the game; he made four saves and allowed three goals."

While the game was not as close as Siuslaw hoped, "before the game, I told the team that I wanted us to score more than one goal and that I did not want the game to end because of the 8 goal score differential," Tomaro said. "We accomplished both of those things, so we are progressing, albeit slowly."

The future of the Siuslaw soccer program, in only its second year of varsity play, looks bright, as the junior varsity team split its first two Sky-Em League matches.

The JV lost 5-1 on Sept. 20 to Marist. Freshman Nicholas May scored the lone goal for the Vikings.

On Sept. 22, Siuslaw JV played Marshfield and won 7-5. After going down 2-3 at the half, the Vikings stormed back and scored 5 goals on the Pirates in the second half. Goal scorers were: Sophomores Eli Tattershall (3), Ethan Jagoe (2) and Bryan Santos (1). Freshmen Sawyer Larson had 8 saves and Nicholas May also scored a goal for Siuslaw.

The Vikings play next Monday, Sept. 27, at Junction City. JV plays at 4:30 p.m. and varsity at 6:30 p.m.
