Crosby, the former owner of the large steam-ship 'Dorothy,' in Portland, has been conned for the last five or six years. During this time he has been constantly employed in the Oregon trade, and has been considered one of the most experienced and reliable captains on the coast. He is now on his way to Astoria, and is expected to arrive in the neighborhood of that place in a few days. Crosby is a man of a decided and forcible character, and is likely to make a strong impression on the people of the coast. He is said to be a man of great energy and determination, and is not likely to be satisfied until he has succeeded in getting a vessel of the proper character built to navigate the Columbia river. It is believed that he is determined to establish a regular line of steamboats between Astoria and Portland, and that he intends to make the Columbia river trade a paying business. Crosby is said to be a man of great enterprise, and is likely to be successful in his undertaking. He is known to be a man of the highest character, and is likely to be respected by the people of the coast.
