

Tri-Weekly Astorian

ASTORIA, OREGON:
D. C. IRELAND, Editor.
SATURDAY, Oct. 11, 1873

General Eaton, now in the Paymaster General's office in Washington, will, if rumor prove true, be assigned to duty in this department.

There are forty-four Granges of the Patrons of Husbandry in Oregon and Washington territory. Daniel Clark of Salem, is master of the State Grange.

Among the papers placed in the sealed box of the Capitol corner stone on the 8th was a Boston paper printed February 11th, 1723. It was contributed by Mr. B. G. Whitehouse of Portland.

Celeman's Celebrated Mustard and the National Yeast Cakes, are among the recent receipts at J. W. Gearhart's, on Chenamus street. Mr. Gearhart is adding to his stock by the arrival of every steamer.

In the Journal of the Proceedings of the 21st Annual Convocation of the Protestant Episcopal Church in Oregon and Washington territory which assembled in Portland on the 29th and 30th of August last, we find the following statistics: Number of baptisms, adults, 38—infants, 157; number of persons confirmed, 82; number of communicants added during the year, 126; total number of communicants, 610; number of Sunday school scholars, 719; marriages, 41; total amount of money raised for various objects during the year, $35,875.

Hon. A. B. Meacham's "lecture" on the Moral troubles at Mercantile Library, San Francisco, is reported in the Bulletin of October 3d. We observe that the chairman of the Peace Commission takes the ground that Ben Wright "acted with a trachery equalling that of Capt. Jack," in which we think the Hon. lecturer is at fault. There are but few apologists in Oregon at this day for any of the murderous outlaws lately executed at Fort Klamath.

The public school at Fort Stevens closed last week. The examination day convinced all of the parents and friends that the children under the instruction of Mrs. Church had made unusual progress. An examination was given at the close of the school which would have done credit to a much larger place. The hall was tastefully decorated by the soldiers at the Fort. The recitations and singing by the children awakened both admiration and surprise.

A Washington letter says the annual repairs at the capital have been completed with the exception of putting down the new carpets in the hall of the House of Representatives. The hall has not been enlarged, but the desks for members have been changed for others much smaller, and henceforth there will be less room for graceful gestures on the part of the Hon. Mr. Buncombe. He will either be compelled to step into the aisle while relieving his pent up eloquence, or allow his gestures, like many eplauses, to be imagined by his enraptured and spell-bound audience.

It has been urged that Farmers' Granges are responsible for the recent financial troubles East. If this is so, then may the farming community see their power. Their determination to right some of the outrages surrounding them from usurping monopolists in the Great West, was certainly only a matter of self-protection, and if their influence spreads to such extent as to cause such a flutter among bogus concerns as in this case—God speed them in it, we say. The operation shows the class of securities guaranteeing them absolution from the evils complained of to have been very flimsy excuses for legitimate business transactions.

A Washington dispatch says that only about fifty thousand volumes of public documents belonging to Senators remain at the Capitol. On the House side immense piles of public documents belonging to members are stowed away, and some disposition will have to be made of them. More than one-half of the members of the last House were not re-elected, and those show no disposition to bear the expense of postage in forwarding the documents to their constituents. A re-elected member who was sending off documents said he had already expended one hundred dollars in postage, which was rather a bitter pill. We hope they may all get a good dose of the bitter pills until they repeal that odious clause of the law which compels people to pay postage on newspapers published in the counties where there are neither postal routes nor post-offices—as in Clatsop.

SUNDAY READING.

The love of God and the world are two different things. If the love of this world dwell in thee, the love of God forsakes thee; renounce that and receive this; it is fit the nobler love should have the best place and acceptance.

There are but three things that make the integrity of Christian faith: believing the words of God, confidence in His goodness, and keeping His commandments.—Jeremy Taylor.

We ought to have been the salt of the earth,—but there has been little savor of Christ about us. We ought to have been the light of the world,—but we have most of us been little glimmering sparks that could scarcely be seen. We ought to have been a peculiar people,—but the difference between us and the world has been faint and small. We ought to have looked on this world as an inn, and we have settled down in it as if it were our home,—it ought to have been counted our school of training for eternity, and we have been at ease in it as if it were our continuing city, or trifled away time in it, as if we were meant to play and not to learn. We ought to have been careful for nothing, we have been careful and troubled about many things,—we have allowed the affairs of this life to eat out the heart of our spirituality, and have been cumbered with much serving.—Ryle.

Gentleness is love in society. It is love holding intercourse with those around it. It is that cordiality of aspect, and that soul of speech which assure us that kind and earnest hearts may still be met with here below. It is that quiet influence which, like the scented flame of an alabaster lamp, fills many a home with light, and warmth, and fragrance altogether. It is the carpet, soft and deep, which, whilst it diffuses a look of ample comfort, deadens many a creaking sound. It wards off at once the summer's glow and winter's wind. It is the pillow on which sickness lays its head and forgets half its misery, and to which death comes in a balmy dream. It is consideration. It is tenderness of feeling. It is warmth of affection. It is promptitude of sympathy. It is love in all its depths, and all its delicacy. It is everything included in that matchless grace,—the gentleness of Christ.

The majority of Frenchmen, if not actually disciples of Voltaire, are at least opposed to the clergy. No bishop in France has held power since the Revolution. Even the conservative peasantry do not like the priestly meddling in politics. The immense free-thinking class omit no opportunity to assert anti-clerical feeling. "No priest at birth, no priest at marriage, no priest at death," is their war-cry. Funerals especially are made an occasion of showing contempt for religion as it exists under priestly administration. The radical city of Lyons has an association whose object is to make funerals an occasion of anti-clerical demonstration. Their energy in the matter has roused conservative rage, and the Prefect has made an order that all such funerals shall take place at six in the morning in summer, and seven in the morning in winter. The Assembly has voted approval of this order.

The Washington territory Legislature may find it necessary to enact a law preventing hereditary thieves from plundering government land of valuable timber along the Sound, which is said to be done with impunity—the fellows actually claiming that Uncle Sam has given them the land.

A decree of August 29th, 1873, exempts from discriminating and customs duties all Grain and Flour imported into France by land or by French and foreign vessels. The law of January 30, 1872, which imposed the above duty, has been repealed.

Minnie Myrtle Miller is in San Francisco. She says Joaquin is reported engaged to marry some English lady, to which she does not feel like urging any objections on her own part.

The general election in this State for member of Congress, will be held on Monday next.

Yellow Fever still continues its ravages at Shreveport, La., and at Memphis, with no signs of abatement.

The American prisoners were arranged at Fort Garry, on the 17th. Merriman was discharged; Bently, Hoy and Kegan pleaded guilty, and were sentenced to twenty four hours confinement. Afterward the Judge banqueted the prisoners.
