The Civil War in Turkey.

Speaking of the civil war in Turkey, the revival of the Crusades, an exchange says: The event, as might naturally be expected, has created the most intense excitement in Christendom. But it is not Richard Cœur de Lion who is buckling on his armor 'now, to seek redress from the Saracen; nor Godfrey of Bouillon; nor mail-clad men at all. What we read is this: The German corvette Medusa has been ordered to leave Messina at once for Salonica; Russian and Austrian menof-war have been ordered to Salonica; the British Consul has ordered a manof-war from the Pirœus to come to Salonica; French iron clad frigates and dispatch vessels have sailed for Salonica; the Italian Government has ordered two men-of-war to go to Salonica at once. What is to come of the new crusade is not very apparent at this moment. If the destruction of Salonica would appease the wrath of Christendom, the fleet of which we have here a more or less distinct outline, would be quite sufficient for the purpose.

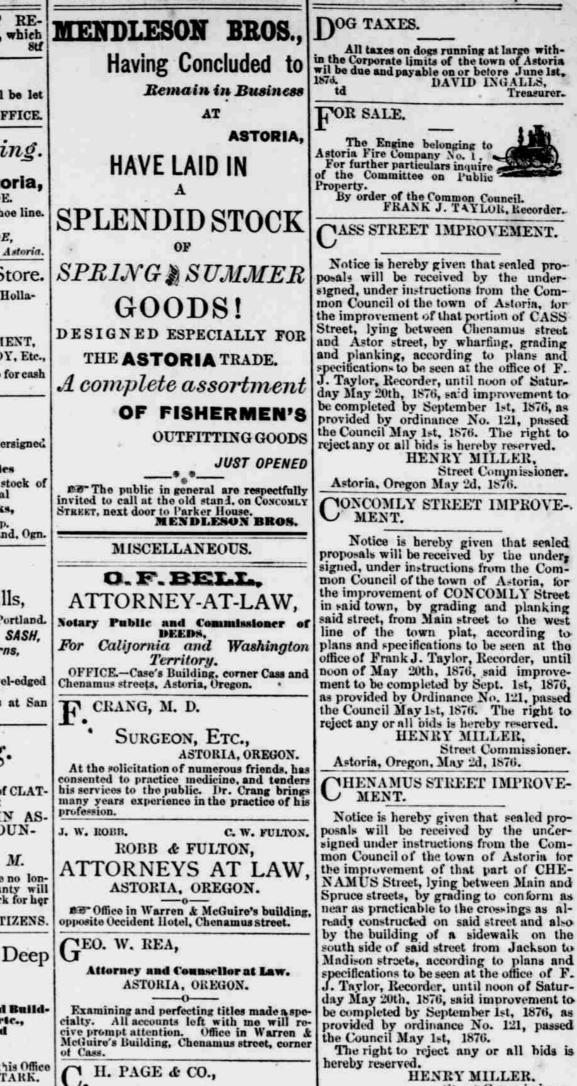

But there is talk of European conference to take the Sick Man in hands and either dispatch him or set him on his legs so that he may be able to maintain order in his Dominions, and what is probably of more importance, pay his debts, about which he has recently been shockingly remiss. If the shadow of the Northern Colossus did not fall ominously in the background, there is not much doubt but that short work would now be made of him. But Europe has not made up its mind whether it prefers the Tartar to the Turk. There is not much fear of the latter except as to the nuisance which he creates. Since the expulsion of the Moors from Spain the Crescent has had no terrors for Christendom. That northern Bear, with phenomenal digestive powers, is a present source of uneasiness. There will, therefore, most likely be satisfaction exacted for sade may come to an end as spedily as it was inaugurated.

sideration, this court-martial, after due deliberation, has unanimously united in the following sentence: Gen. Biron Canal, general of division of the armies of the republic, Col. Canal, known as Petit Canal, Colonel Calico Carrie and Colonel Fleurian, are all sentenced to the penality of death with military degradation, and to pay the sum of $20,000 to the widows and orphans of those they have killed. All officers of the republic are instructed to co-operate in the carrying out of the same. In faith of which the present is signed by the President, Vice President and Judges." On the 27th of September, 1875, an arrangement was arrived at between the Haytien minister, Mr. Preston, and Secretary of State Fish, at Washington, that Canal should be surrendered by the American Minister, and exiled from Hayti, never to return again, except by permission of the Government. United States man-ofwar Powhattan, which was under sailing orders to leave New York for Portau-Prince, in case of national complications, was ordered to proceed to Norfork. In January four ten-barreled Gatling guns and 2,000 repeating rifles were sent to Havti for the. Government to repress any further attempted revolution. Meanwhile Ovide Canneau, the agent of the exiled General Canal, who was then living at Kingston, Jamaica, with a number of revolutionary friends, was purchasing arms in New York for the contemplated revolutions. About this time Domingue received by the steamer Chorrucca a number of horses from the Spanish Government, the decorateur of Isabel La Catollen, and numerous other offerings, for payment of which he promised to banish all Cuban refugees out of the country. This made Domingue more unpopular then before. Foreign merchants were taxed $1,200 yearly, and each of their clerks $300, and the said merchants were prohibited from selling less then $500 worth of goods, and the coffee was taxed $1 80 per 100 pounds, which effectually killed the trade. In Feb-uary, an iron "Pantheon," dedicated to the great men of Hayti, was shipped from this city, at the cost of $70,-000 but not paid for, likewise a statue of Vice President Septimus Rameau, now dead (the President's nephew), and an iron house for him. A bronze equestrian statue of Domingue, the fugitive President, is now in New York awaiting shipment and payment. An order to close the foregin club at Port-au-Prince was also issued, but the American Minister, who is its Presdent, refused to obey the order. On the 7th instant General Biron

THE HAYTIAN REVOLUTION.

Brief History of the Events which Have Just Culminated in the Death of President Domingue.

From the New York Herald. General Michel Domingue, who succeeded Nissajo Saget, was inaugarted President of the Republic of Hayti on the 14th of June, 1874, and appointed the following Provisional' Cabinet :--Mons. Excellent, Foreign Relations; General Heurtelon, Interior; General Faure, War and Navy, and Mr. Boco, Justice. The President promised reform and liberty, but his promises were not fulfilled. In November following it was found that stupendous frauds existed in the Customs-house, and that the place was only a nest of robbers. The matter was allowed to go almost unheeded. In February, 1875, a treaty of amity and commence was agreed upon between Hayti and its neighbor, San Domingo.

tion broke out in Port-au-Prince on the event of the great agricultural fete of that day, and in which the revolutionists Gens. Brice and Monplaisir Pierre were killed. Gen. Biron Canal the coming President,-took a prominent part in the uprising, and showed great bravery, he subsequently escaped by taking refuge at the country residence of the American Minister E. D. Bassit. Subsequently an amnesty was granted to all save General Canal. About forty people were killed in the uprising. After it took place widespread discontent against the Government of Domingue existed, without cessation.

Up to September last the American Minister had not surrendered Canal, GROCERY STORE, MAIN ST., and serious complication was threatened with this government. Canal had been sentenced to death on the 6th of THE BEST ASSORTMENT OF of July by court-martial, iu the following terms: "Taking all facts into con- Lamp Chimneys in the City at Case's.
