

Don't You Strike that Cow.

Written for the Astorian.

Don't you strike that cow. For her days are almost numbered now.

She has been the family's stay, And has been faithful every day;

That old cow did never fail, And true each day, she fills the pail.

Go count the wrinkles on her horn, She was old before you were born.

You crumbed your bread in her milk, And her profit brought the silk.

Postage on the WEEKLY ASTORIAN is two cents a paper to any part of the United States, when sent by people not connected with the newspaper office.
