OREGON'S CHANCE.

From the Oregon Statesman. Every indication now points to improved times in Oregon. Crop prospects were never better and the promise of good prices is very flat-tering. From Hon. G. W. Colby, tering. From Hon. G. W. Colby, the champion Granger of Northern California, we learn that the tide of emigration, from the Southern part is simply immense, all headed towards simply immense, all headed towards Oregon. But it is not alone from California that immigrants are coming; they are coming by the hundreds fron Eastern States. Oregon is no longer known as a county in California, but as a State possessing vast natural resources and offering better inducements to settlers than any other, of the States or Territories, of the United States. Sympathizing with California in her unfavorable prospects for crops for the coming harvest, yet her misfortune has had the effect to turn the tide of emigration towards Oregon—where the crops never fail. Heretofore California has been enabled to hold out inducements to settle in that State; but now things have changed, not only the Eastern emigration, but unfavorable prospects for crops for not only the Eastern emigration, but also great numbers of Californians are leaving their sun-parched homes for the land of "occasional mists," Oregon has natural resources for a rich and populous state, and all that is now required is development; to accomplish this it will take capital and muscle. One of the first things that should command attention, in such a way as to insure success, is railroad communication with the rest of the world. Thomsen's of emigrants are way as to insure success, is railroad communication with the rest of the world. Thomsen's of emigrants are way as will enable him to bring order out of chaos. leaving their sun-parched homes for world. Thousands of emigrants are kept from coming to our state by reason of the hardships and expense of getting here. It is not for this purpose alone that railroads are needed but for the general impulse they will give business generally as well. Our state can never become permanently prosperous while sparsely settled.

Our commerce at present is to small to command any considerable attention; hence we are food for monopolies. With increased population comes increased business and this invites competition, all combined pro-duces a market at remurnerative prices. Now is Oregon's opportunity to move in such enterprises as will tend to develope her resourses. The tide of immigration is pouring in upon us-the season has been favorable, and every indication points to better times. Then, while in the flood tide of prosperity, let enteprise and skill direct all things in the proper channels of continued growth and prosperity. Railroads cannot be built in a day, it takes time and means, the Prescriptions filled with care Day or Night. means are not easily obttained; comnecessary aid; therefore, in order to accomplish anything in that direction, under our for Fish Wounds. tion, under our present condition, it is necessary to concentrate. Select some one of the many needed routes and concentrate all efforts to accomplish the end-then, with in- PAIN ERADICATOR, creased powers, we may be able to take another, and so on till all that are needed have become accomplished facts.
