Want to Switch off.

The Missouri border towns do not seem to have any great liking for the parent state. St. Louis has for some time signified a desire to be turned over to Illinois, and now Kansas city wants to be received into the embrace of Kansas. By name and location, it is contented, Kansas city belongs to Kansas state--which seems plausible enough, unless the town receives a new designation.

—The effort of some good people in central New York to rid that locality of the plague spot, the Onedia community, ought to be successful. For over a quarter of a century that institution has cursed by its presence the communities about it, and its blasting effects upon good morals are continually appearing. It is to New York state what Utah is to the nation, and the great commonwealth should unite most heartily in the effort to rid itself of such a damning institution. The movement is organized by some of the strongest and best elements of society in that portion of the state, and with proper help will win. If the genius of our political institutions gives license to such aggregated disregard of moral and human law, we cannot justly frown upon those individuals who violate these same laws. These remarks apply to Astoria.

"Keep it Out of the Papers."

Cinquanté Sa'urde's Night.

"For heaven's sake! don't let it get into the papers," is the first cry of a person caught in a mean scrape. Keep it out of the papers and it is all right. No matter how contemptible or dishonest the position may be, or how much reason the offender may have for shame, remorse and contrition, if the circumstance can be kept from "cormorants of the press," as the people who have good reasons to be afraid of newspaper reporters sometimes call them, he is tranquil and happy. We are no champion for that extreme license of the press that is sometimes displayed, but we have noticed that the ones who cry out loudest against newspaper disclosures are generally those whose own lives and acts would not bear very close examination. People who live clean, straightforward lives, have little to fear from the newspapers.

—Another scare about the world coming to an end is on the tapis in London. We have recovered from the effects of the one we had a few months ago, and can afford to smile at the London savans who pretend to know more than any human being has a right to know, no matter how large his head is. It is a pretty well ascertained fact that the world is bound to come to an end sometime, but it is perfectly safe to make preparations to honestly pay the note that will come due next year. Bailey, of the Danbury News, hits this phase of eccentricity in a very neat way. He who made a fair living out of his pen-knew one of these Second Adventists' vulgar notions. "He used to borrow a handful of coals and a pound or two of sugar and two or three logs of wood of his neighbors, giving as an excuse that the world was coming to an end so quickly that there was no use in a great stock of provisions. He lived one whole winter in this way, but in the spring it was suggested to him that there was not people enough in that region who sympathized with him to make it an object for him to live there any longer. It is all very well to pray to God with unctuous eloquence provided you don't contradict your own prayers, by preying on your neighbors."

Buckskin gloves are dear, because the deer is the buck's skin.

A New Industry.

Daily Oregonian, March 29th.

Thursday evening a new and rakish-looking craft, the Emily Stephens, arrived in our harbor from Westport, towed by the tug Rip Van Winkle. The dimensions of this vessel are as follows: length, 87 feet over all; beam 21 feet 10 inches; depth of hold, 8 feet. She was built for the halibut fishery and has ten compartments, or ice chests, in her hold, in which to pack and preserve fish. In the east this is done, and fish is successfully conveyed over 1000 miles to market. Thoroughness and durability appear in the build and rig of this little vessel, and reflect credit upon the commander, Captain Alex. A Henderson, under whose superintendent the work has been carried forward. This beautiful vessel was built at Westport by Mr. Stephens; her iron work was furnished by Messrs. Arndt & Ferchen of Astoria, and her sails were made by A. M. Johnson of Astoria. Indeed, from truck to keelson, she is Oregonian, and goes forth the pioneer of fishermen. Indeed, why not? Did the eastern fishermen but know our valuable fishing grounds, mild climate and exemption from the perils incident to fishing on the Grand Banks, many of them would speedily leave the stormy Atlantic for our Pacific and prolific waters. We are persuaded that here is a large and profitable industry, which promises satisfactory returns to capitalists, and we heartily wish Captain Henderson and his crew success.

Third and Last Call.

We simply must have money from those who owe us. Our creditors want theirs and we must have what is due us so that we can pay them. This is the last call we shall make through the paper. If there is not a settlement in some way, very soon, we shall be compelled to place our accounts in the hands of an attorney for collection.
