TELEGRAPHIC NEWS.

Eastern States.

Jim, Howlish Wampos, Moses and other Indians, are coming home, per chance to fight. They are in charge of Major Cornoyer. Mr. Cornoyer stated the chiefs were well satisfied with the result of their visit to Washington. Moses had got a tract of land or reservation set aside for him and his people, and for all those tribes who wish to join him. The reservation is located on the Columbia river. Twelve tribes will locate on this reservation. The Walla Wallas, Umatillas and Cayuses will select their lands in severalty, each member of the tribes being entitled to 160 acres. Some of the chiefs who visited Washington wished to visit Chief Joseph of the Nez Percés, now in the Indian territory, but this wish was not granted them, the trip being regarded too long, expensive and impolitic.

There is no longer any doubt that the president intends to veto the army appropriation bill. The veto message will be sent to congress to-day. In view of this announcement, and of the certainty that the pending legislative appropriation bill will also be vetoed, there is much consultation already in progress among the most prominent democrats as to the proper course for the majority to pursue when the dead lock actually occurs. Of course the matter will not be decided without great difficulty, for there are many conflicting views and a large proportion of the democrats in congress continue to condemn all propositions of compromise, but several of the coolest democratic leaders, have recently privately expressed themselves in favor of the passage of a joint resolution, extending last year's appropriations until December, and of prompt adjournment. This plan would readily obtain a majority vote in both houses by the union of republicans with hard money democrats, who wish an early adjournment to prevent further widening of the breach between eastern and western wings of the party, which is likely to result from continued tinkering with finances, but soft money men have a majority of the votes in the democratic caucus, and the adoption of this expedient for escape from the dead lock is therefore still very uncertain.

Pacific Coast Dispatches.

Three accidents occurred in the Newcastle (Seattle) mine on Saturday; one from whisky and two from falling coal.

Stubborn Justice.

A little trouble took place on Sunday week last at the Spokane, between the whites and Indians. The Indians claimed the land which a man named Grant had settled on, and ordered him off. Grant refused to go, and swore out a warrant against the Indians. One was arrested, and as they were about to lock him up twenty-five mounted Indians rode in and demanded his release, saying they would take him from the sheriff by force if he did not let him go quietly. The justice stepped between the prisoner and his friends with a slug, telling them to take him if they wanted him. The Indians had a pow-wow and decided that they did not care about taking him. Monday noon Chief Gary and Enoch came to the justice and said that they were very sorry their men had caused any trouble, and that it should not occur again.

—A Mr. Stockwell in the Massachusetts legislature wants to memorialize congress for a law making ten hours labor a day's work. What business has congress to say what shall be a day's work in Massachusetts? Congress could just as well fix the price of molasses, or the size of beer tumblers. Congress often enough meddles with what don't belong to them, without inviting such interference.

—Queen Victoria's family, if her children take after her, may be very numerous before her death. The Princess Alice who died last year, married at sixteen years, bore seven children, five of them now living.

A Wasp Nest in Stone.

Eureka (New) Sentinel.

While blasting rock from one of the quarries on the hillside west of town the attention of one of the workmen was attracted to the curious formation of one of the pieces that had been split off. An examination proved that imbedded in the rock was a wasp's nest the texture and cells of which although turned to stone, were plainly visible. On breaking open the cells the larva and two perfectly formed wasps were found in the same petrified condition as the nest. There is no visible crack or outlet by which the insects could have penetrated the rock, and the pieces in which this curious formation was found was taken from a depth of forty feet from the surface. The rock is granitic sandstone of sedimentary origin. The specimens were carefully cut out and forwarded to the Smithsonian institute at Washington.

Every one ought to be busy, but no one ought to be so busy that he can't do his work well. An overworked man is like a certain plough of which we have heard, which turned up a great deal more than it could turn over.
