—The Valley Forge took on at Astoria 11,148 bushels of wheat, valued at $18-730 50.
—Baby carriages of the best styles, and at low prices, at Loeb's.
—But very little of the wreck of the Great Republic remains visible from Astoria.
—Adler cannot be undersold in the blank book and stationery line.
—The salmon catch yesterday was very light, a great falling off in the last few days.
—Blank invoice files cheaper than can be bought anywhere, at Adler's.
—Through courtesy of Mr. Peter Wilhelm we learn that the Hertfordshire and from Queen, bound for this port via Victoria have arrived at Victoria.
—Rustic frames for 25 cents up, and a handsome assortment of other kinds, at Adler's.
—A good, honest laugh at a good honest joke or sarcasm, rubs out the gathering wrinkles of care; but an ill-tempered joke is like a poisoned arrow, which makes a wound and leaves its poison after it has been withdrawn.
—Best Salem flour is sold in this city at $5 50 per barrel by Warren & McGuire.
—The Bee of the 3d inst. has the following: The board of trade of this city has refused to take dispatches any longer, and people will look in vain at the bulletin board at the New Market theatre for word from the bar at Astoria.
—Boat sponges, wholesale and retail at Dements drug store, Astoria. Five thousand just received.
—The Astoria Chamber of Commerce have ceased to take shipping dispatches through the Western Union office in this city. Mr. Peter Wilhelm has made arrangements to take all shipping dispatches for the accommodation of his friends.
—Our elegant court house is now undergoing some long needed improvements. By W. B. Headington that when completed will add much to the convenience and capacity, and would suggest that a broom well applied would contribute greatly to the comfort of a well regulated house of justice.
—"My name is Beauty, and I belong to C. S. Wright." Such was the name engraved on the collar of a very fancy canine of the rat terrier specie, which was seen frolicking about the Occident hotel yesterday, putting on as much style in his new and gaudy colors as a French dancing master.
—Passengers by the Oregon express themselves delighted with the manner in which that vessel was governed by Capt. Connor on her last trip up. A regulation by which the grand scramble for places at the table is avoided, was regarded as a very agreeable feature, and its continued enforcement will make travelling per steamer much more pleasant.
—The May number of Harper's Magazine is very richly illustrated, containing over one hundred engravings that may confidently challenge comparison.
The illustrated subjects offer unusual opportunities for picturesque treatment.
At the outset the reader, in "A Peninsular Canaan," is transported to that wonderful region known (though it can scarcely be said to be known at all), as the eastern shore on the Chesapeake bay. Howard Pyle, who writes the article, also illustrates it with eighteen novel pictures of character and scenery.
In addition there are contributions from G. P. Lathrop, R. H. Stoddard, W. W.
Harnes and others. In all, making it a most excellent and interesting number.
—An Illinois man sleeps on a spot of ground left bare for the purpose in his house, and has an attendant shovel clean earth over him, to take the place of bedclothes. He believes that in this way he guards against disease.
—Alexander H. Stephens was so poor when he commenced the practice of law that he had to live on $6 per month. This is said to be the secret of his assistance to poor young men, over fifty of whom he has assisted to a liberal education.

The Cure of Dipomania.
San Francisco Bulletin.
Drunkenness is not more a national vice than it is a national disease. The reformatories which have been established for the cure of drunkenness have only attained partial success. The Inebriate Asylum established by the State of New York at Binghamton, according to late reports, has only effected a reformation or cure in a small per cent of cases. The pathology of drunkenness has attracted a great deal of attention during the last quarter of a century.
But a large class of inveterate drunkards have been considered incurable, as much so perhaps as the incurably insane. Here and there a drunkard who appears to be fargone is restored, or so nearly so that he only lapses after long intervals. His life, however, is one long struggle against his old enemy. He is afraid to encounter temptation. He is fully aware that his appetite is only sleeping, and that at any time the demon may be aroused within him. Men have recovered from drunkenness and remained sober for years, and then have fallen into the old ways because the sleeping appetite had been aroused by some stimulant thoughtlessly taken. Now if some remedy could be found whereby the appetite for strong drink could be utterly extinguished, and that without injuring the patient in the least, we should say that a great boon would be conferred upon humanity. At one time and another remedies have been proposed. But none of them have been satisfactory. Patients have been made deathly sick by violent medicines; a few cases have been cited where the appetite had been wholly destroyed but the authenticity of these rates rests rather upon tradition than upon any tangible facts. No remedy would be popular, or come into general use, which is likely to kill the patient as to cure him.
Some months ago the cures effected of dipomania by Dr. Unger of Chicago, attracted the attention of the local papers. The Chicago Tribune thought the matter of sufficient consequence to devote leading editorial articles to the method of treatment and the results. Wonderful cures at once raise the suggestion of quackery, which is repugnant to the minds of right thinking people. But the principle editor of the Tribune had been able to verify the reported facts in great number of instances, some of which are very remarkable.
From these and from the pamphlet published by Dr. D'Unger, the following facts appear to be well established: (1) That no case of drunkenness, however, hopeless, has failed of a cure in the hands of this practitioner. (2) There is no secret about the remedy applied. (3) The results are not only certain but there is no bad effect as a contingent of the cure. It is assumed at the outset that the two kinds of drunkenness, continuous and periodical, are a disease. The victim drinks against his will.
Nothing can restrain him. The entreaties of wife, children, the certain ruin of his affairs, and his own physical destruction, will not keep him back from indulgence.
The craving is overmastering. He must drink if certain destruction comes within an hour. It is the old story. The culture is gnawing at his vitals. Dr. D'Unger's remedy is Cinchona Rubra, or pure Loxa bark. This, he claims, possesses three properties: (1) The tonic property; (2) The anti-periodic property; and (3) The cumulative property, by which it is understood that a single drop will finally produce as much stimulation as sixty drops did at the outset.
It is further claimed that by far the larger part of all the cinchona brought to this country is not available, or does not come up to the standard required. He used only "pure Loxa bark, the original crown quill selected from the seroons." He says that not only is this concentrated tincture, as used by him, a certain cure for drunkenness, but that he is in the receipt of thousands of letters from all parts of the Union and from foreign countries. "These missives have been written in nearly all cases by educated and intelligent people, such as lawyers, ministers, physicians and other professional men; statesmen, bankers, merchants, manufacturers, mechanics, husbands, wives, fathers, mothers, brothers and sisters, many of them depicting in language most affecting, their suffering from the whisky curse." These letters are confidential, and, therefore, names cannot be given. Fifteen cases are cited, the extracts being in the language of the patient. The testimony is generally to this main point, that the party has no further desire for strong drinks. No. 4 says that he is a professional man and had been a drinker for twenty years. During the past year he had consumed about a quart of whisky a day.

He declares that a bottle of whisky had been standing on his shelf for several days, and that he had not the slightest desire for liquor. He considers his salvation complete.
The gist of this cumulative testimony is that the patient has no desire to return to his old habit.
This testimony is corroborated by the personal observation in a number of instances of one or more citizens known to us. It is further affirmed that Dr. D'Unger furnishes the remedy at about the cost, and that the information is not given for the purpose of making money.
In view of such facts, criticism is in a great measure disarmed.
Is there a harmless and positive remedy for drunkenness, and one within the reach of most persons who have suffered from dipso-mania? Can an inveterate drunkard, one who has been given up by his friend, be radically cured, and that by a process both simple and harmless. The subject is certainly one of great moment. Facts when they come to light can only be given in a general way. In a single instance known to us in this vicinity where the remedy was applied, a cure has been reported.
The name, of course, cannot be given. But cases are cited by others outside this pamphlet which seems to be more striking than any of those cited therein. If there is a sovereign remedy for drunkenness, harmless and easy of application, the facts ought to be known to the public.
Horse Flesh in Sausages.
New York Herald.
Health Inspector Cronan, of Jersey city, while engaged in his daily examination of the cow stables and cattle yards in that city and vicinity a few days ago, was, by accident, placed in possession of facts which, when fully investigated, he expects will disclose a business which is carried on in that city in violation of all law and decency. After making a tour of inspection among the cattle in a yard on Tonelle avenue, on the Heights, he was about to drive off when he discovered the leg of a horse. He asked the stableman where that came from, and for an answer the man took him to another portion of the yard where the three remaining legs were. He told the inspector that a few days previous a horse had died at the place and a man came there who skinned the carcass and cut off the legs. "What became of the carcass after that," asked the inspector, and the man replied that it had been cut up into a half dozen pieces and taken away with the hide. Inspector Cronan pressed his questions, and the man told him that the person who took away the hide and carcass kept a place just outside of the city limits, and that the carcasses of all dead animals he got were disposed of to sausage makers.
The man then grew reluctant and denied that he knew the man's name or the exact location of his place of business. He said he did not charge him anything for removing the carcass, and that had been the first time he had ever visited his stable.
