The Missing Link.

Our mystery is no longer a mystery. The absence of the body to the skeleton, and non-appearance of head and shoulders for so long space is explained on page 356 Johnson's natural history, vol. 11, where an illustration is given of the skeleton of a large sea turtle. What adds to the beauty of this skeleton, however, is a fact no doubt that it is from the very same turtle left at the Occident on the arrival of the barkentine Jane A. Falkenburg from Honolulu, and of the soup prepared from which we partook with such hearty zest. Considering that we enjoyed the soup we cannot complain because the bones were played off upon us as the bones of the veritable missing link, so much talked of by the disciples of Darwin.

Our Waifs.

It is not necessary to the subject to report the history of those forlorn waifs published in THE DAILY ASTORIAN, recently. Readers are already familiar with them,—in hope of turning them to good account we sent them to a valued contributor for transformation. Following is the reply:

EDITOR ASTORIAN: I herewith inclose the forlorn waif entrusted to my tender mercies for a brief season. Although I have smoothed out the tangled locks—removed much superfluous matter, and added here a little and there a little,—yet I do not deem my attempts at metamorphosis a very marked success. Indeed I think all such sadly in need of transmigration or—better still—annihilation. Yours, Waif Wearily.

Fourth of July.

At the fourth of July meeting Mr. C. H. Stockton was chosen President, and B. S. Worsley secretary. A motion was adopted to appoint a committee of five to canvass the city for contributions. The committee was then appointed consisting of John Fox, B. S. Worsley, Carl Adler, and C. H. Stockton, P. McGrath. A motion was adopted providing for a committee of three on programme, to report at the next meeting. Peter Wilhelm, P. McGrath, and M. D. Kant were appointed as such committee. The meeting adjourned to meet at the Court-house on Monday evening next, June 16th, at half past seven o'clock. The meeting was an enthusiastic one, and the committee will proceed with the work to-day.

The ladies will please not forget to attend the auction sale of ladies goods at Mr. Holden's auction rooms to-day. He has made arrangements for their convenience, and every opportunity will be given to examine the articles before purchasing. The goods will be sold by the piece and not by the box, so that each bidder will have a chance to buy just what they want.

IN MEMORIAM.

ASTORIA, June 9, 1879. EDITOR ASTORIAN: Will you be kind enough to publish in your valuable journal the following sketch of the late John Burke and his daughter Emma, and oblige a comrade, who has served with him in the union army, during the war of the rebellion, and participated in forty-six engagements with him, from the first Bull Run to the surrender at Appomattox. John Burke was born in the parish of Cedra, in the county of Tipperary, Ireland, about the year 1825. Landed in the city of New Orleans, Louisiana, in 1850. Enlisted in the United States army in 1851. Was then married, his wife being the widow of an American soldier named Wallace, and was the first American woman to enter the city of Mexico after its surrender during the Mexican war. Also followed the fortunes of war with Mr. Burke. And I may here remark that on the morning of the first of July, 1862, while in sight of Malvern hill, and going in that direction, a shell from a rebel battery burst under the wagon cover, under which herself and the late Emma were seated, (Emma being then an infant). The driver being wounded slightly, and more scared than hurt, fled in horror from the spot, leaving them, woman and child, and was never seen in his company after. He reported at fortress Monroe for medical treatment. Mrs. Burke then took the reins and drove her six mule team into camp, under a fire from the rebel batteries of Mugerod, and was received with a shout of triumph by the front of the grand army of the Potomac. After the war was over Mrs. Burke gave up the martial spirit to her redeemer, at Harper's Ferry, Va., and was buried at that place with military honors. John came to Fort Stevens in 1862 in October of that year, when that place was a wilderness, and toiled with the balance of the veterans of his late campaign to make it one of the nicest spots on the Pacific slope. Both the late Mr. Burke and the mother of the present commander, Major Throckmorton, one of the bravest young officers of the late war, and who always had the confidence of the enlisted men, as well for his kind treatment of them as for his gallant bravery in action, he having in fact fought against him at the first Bull Run, and commanding the dreaded Black Horse Cavalry of Virginia. While Burke was in the army he home-steaded the place where he met with his sad end, and from the manner in which the people of Clatsop collected to pay their last tribute of respect to his remains, and that of his daughter, showed that he was as good a citizen as he was brave as a soldier.

Miss Emma Burke was born at camp Upton, Virginia, three miles south of Alexandria, and though not being able to drudge the enemy; nevertheless, went through the campaign and was several times under fire. In 1865, before starting from the east, she was placed in a convent by her father, and only lately arrived in this state from Washington, to meet her sad end, and to deliver up her spirit with that of the father, by whom she was dearly loved. I have often nursed her in her infancy, and never thought of her but with a longing desire to do the last kind act to their mortal remains.

May they rest in peace. There is consolation even in misery, and I shall for ever feel grateful to the people of Clatsop, and the good Astorians, for the manner in which they assisted, and the respect they showed, to the last remains of my countryman and his daughter. THOMAS DEALEY. One of the boys that licked the Jannies.
