

The Daily Astorian.

ASTORIA, OREGON: THURSDAY JAN. 6, 1881. D. C. IRELAND Editor.

The Cascade Canal.

There is no necessity for THE ASTORIAN to explain its position relative to existing necessities for speedy completion of the Cascade canal.

We are thoroughly understood on that point.

No more jaw-bone is wanted from us.

We publish the Oregonian's article entire, and endorse the remarks of our correspondent, with this simple addition: That in all times past THE ASTORIAN has been as indefatigable in its efforts to make men see the necessity for this improvement as for the improvement of the bar.

We propose to keep on at the same rate in future, and if we can make the Oregonian see its error in this as we have convinced it of the necessity for the bar improvements, something will have been accomplished.

Personally, from the course recently adopted by Dalles people towards the editor of THE ASTORIAN, we care but very little whether the appropriation for the locks this winter is $500,000 or five cents.

One thing, however, is decided and certain; we think too much of Oregon to hope for less than $500,000, and if less than $500,000 is obtained, the Dalles and all eastern Oregon will be bottled up for the next ten, fifteen, or twenty years, just as Astoria is shut off—all for the want of honest, confident feeling, towards the men who have done the most, and who are still persistent in doing all they can, for the good of the entire state—irrespective of politics, religion or locality.

The Money Forgery.

There is now full, though tardy, confession of the Money forgery by the paper that first uttered it. It ought to be no gratification to anybody to have the fact recalled that this infamous act was made the basis of a desperate attempt to carry a presidential election. The paper known as Truth, in admitting and retracting the forgery, says it was imposed on by prominent men whose names it gives, and who were swift to bear witness that the letter was a genuine one. Perhaps this miserable affair was the most despicable thing ever known in politics. Yet beyond doubt, forgery though it was, it gave General Hancock all the electoral votes he received outside the limits of the late southern confederacy.

The Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe company announces that that road and the Southern Pacific is now completed and connected.

The London correspondent of the New York Times writes to that paper that the portrait of Gladstone in Scribner has given great satisfaction to the premier's family and friends.

Apropos of the revision of the new Testament, now on the eve of publication in this country and in Europe, Scribner will contain three articles, one by Rev. Charles S. Robinson, D. D., on The Bible Society and the new Revision, in which the record of the society on this whole subject is traced with some care; the second by Professor George P. Fisher, of Yale college, showing how the new Testament has come down to us, and the third a review of the revision itself, in which the excellence and thoroughness of the work of the American scholars will be pointed out. The first appears in the January number.

All citizens of Oregon who desire to inform their friends in the states of the condition and progress of this state, can have no more complete and comprehensive volume of facts to send them than by subscribing for this journal, and having us mail it weekly to their friends. We mail it as directed. For $5.00 in advance, we mail three copies of THE WEEKLY ASTORIAN one year.

Letter from Chemeketa.

EDITOR ASTORIAN:

"Mr. Kinney is Dead"

This announcement, made in the early hours of Saturday morning, sent a thrill of sorrow throughout the city far exceeding that which usually accompanies the loss of a citizen of whatever age or position. For a month past Mr. Albert W. Kinney had been suffering from an attack of lung fever, but with the best of care, in addition to the devoted attentions of his brothers, Drs. Aug. C. and Alfred Kinney, it was the universal feeling that he would be spared; but in the prime of life he has been cut off in a career of usefulness—an illustration of the mysteries of Providence which takes one full of life and honors, and leaves many a worthless one. In one sense Mr. Kinney was a public benefactor, the Salem mills stand as a monument to his progressiveness and enterprise, and he had in contemplation public improvements which would benefit the entire city. He was a constant member of the Baptist church, and the parsonage adjoining was a gift to the church from him, and that was not the least of his good works for both pastor and people. His life was filled with acts of unobtrusive kindness, and for fifteen years he lived among us blameless. To his wife and aged mother his loss is unspeakable and full of sorrow, and of the large circle of brothers and sisters he seemed to have been the counselor and adviser. To those in his employ he was ever liberal, considerate and kind. A very large concourse gathered at Rural Cemetery on Sunday to pay their last respects to all that was mortal of him, and tears dimmed the eyes of many a strong man as the sod fell—"ashes to ashes, and dust to dust,"—and turned back to busy life feeling that when the sod covered ALBERT W. KINNEY, a void was created in our city which can never be filled. But 'though gone, he will never be forgotten.

Compliments of the Season.

New Year's Day proved to be as beautiful, sunshiny and cloudless as the most enthusiastic caller could desire, and all day long parties of gentlemen passed from house to house paying respects to lady friends and acquaintances, and leaving compliments in the shape of cards of every description and design known to the printer's art or the engraver's cunning. The inhospitable style of hanging out a basket was adopted only by a few. All housekeepers know it requires an outlay of time and skill to prepare for New Year's Calls, but as the gentlemen ask for one day only in the 365, they have a right to expect every courtesy at the hands of the ladies.

Your correspondent acknowledges compliments from THE ASTORIAN for 1881.

Taking a Little Nap.

Salem is not nearly so dead as you may have been lead to suppose, not even sleeping soundly, only taking a little nap now and then; awakening refreshed with renewed freshness. It sometimes seems as if Somnus had been around sowing poppy seed, with a soporific effect. But the place has fewer vacant dwellings than for some time previous, and business is really thriving in every department. A project to bring the passenger depot into the city and locate it near the Salem mills has been put forward, but the death of Mr. Kinney will doubtless retard it somewhat.

The Press of Salem.

Our only newspaper, the Statesman; has tried the experiment of changing to an evening paper with indifferent success it appears, as it is to be again changed to morning edition. A morning paper is to breakfast what desert is to dinner, a luxury most desirable, if not absolutely indispensable. A resident of Astoria visiting this city expressed—and justly—surprise that we could not "afford" a morning daily. Why, said he if our little town down at the mouth of the river can support one, I should think the Capital might do so,—which it proposes to do in future. THE ASTORIAN with its clear typography, and choice spicy contents, is an ever welcome visitor at our "sanctum."

Quotation from Bryant.

Thinking of Astoria always recalls our sea-side lore. The sweetest singers attune their voices to chant of waves, and breakers and foam crests. Bryant says:

"I look forth Over the boundless blue, where joyously The bright crests of immutable waves Glance to the sun at once. I behold the ships gliding from cape to cape. Or steaming toward far lands, or hastening Home from the old world. It is thy friendly breeze, That bears them, with the riches of the land And treasure of dear lives, fill, in the port. The shouting seaman climbs and furls the sail."

A poem which you may read in prose "down by the wharves" all most any day in your little sea-side city.

Social Astoria.

A railroad appears at present to be the desire of Astoria's heart, and its fulfillment is doubtless desirable from a commercial point of view, but the ingress of strangers will break up that family feeling which is one of its charms. Isolated as you are from the rest of the world, the impression is made on a stranger that you live as one great family, necessarily harmonious, as dependent upon each other for society, and from appearances, your city can boast of more social life than many a place of greater pretensions.

With a "Happy New Year," to THE ASTORIAN, its readers, and Astorians all—if not too late.

CHEMEKETA, SALEM, JANUARY 3d, 1881.

Magnus C. Crosby has a first-class workman, and is prepared to do all kinds of jobbing in tin, sheet iron and copper, plumbing and steam fitting. Full satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded.

What measure it is to pay ones' debts! In the first place, it removes that uneasiness which a person feels from dependence and obligation. It affords pleasure to the creditor, and therefore gratifies our social affection. It provides that future confidence which is so interesting to an honest mind. It opens a prospect of being readily supplied with what you want on future occasions. It leaves a consciousness of our virtue; and it is a measure we know to be right, both in point of justice and sound economy. Finally, it is the main support of simple reputation. Pay us, that we may pay others.
