Men who are hoping that some time and somehow in the great future good will come to them out of the evil habits which they form and cultivate here, should remember that in whatever fields they sow the seed, in those and in no other will their harvest grow.

There was a curious sort of dinner at London the other day, distinguished electricians being the guests. In the center of the table was a covered dish, alleged to contain a "gymnotus," fresh from a river in South America. The chairman, instead of saying grace, spoke to the dish as if asking some one there to ask the usual blessing. Then a solemu, but distinct voice was heard, apparently coming from the dish repeating the favorite form. The cover was then raised. and there was a telephone, somebody at the other end having performed the pious service.
