Vol. XIV.

Astoria, Oregon, Saturday Morning, February 12, 1881.

No. 36.

GENERAL FOREIGN NEWS.

BY MAIL AND TELEGRAPH.

Steamship Missing.

Bristol, Feb. 9.—The City, which sailed from New York for Bristol, England, Dec. 28th, is 26 days overdue. She carried a general cargo of about 2000 tons; had a crew of 27 men, officers included, and no passengers.

The New Spanish Ministry.

MADRID, Feb. 9.—In the cortes to-day Senor Sagasta, announcing the formation of a new cabinet, stated that the ministry would follow the principles they supported in opposition benches.

Riotous Demonstrations.

DUBLIN, Feb. 9.—A serious encounter has taken place at a fair held in Kilkenny, in which the people stoned the police. An encounter also occurred at Bally Hounis where the police charged the crowd at the point of the bayonet.

The Great Dutch Regatta.

PARIS, Feb. 9.—De Lesseps received a telegram from Panama announcing commencement of operations on the canal.

International Copyright.

PARIS, Feb. 9.—A meeting of the copyright association to-day passed a resolution generally approving the American proposal for a copyright treaty; but advocating an extension of time within which English books should be published in America to six months, and condemning a suggestion to the British board of trade, that American reprints with authors' consent be admitted to England.

A Delusion.

San Jose Mercury.

The tax payer who, under our constitution, imagines that because the mortgage on his farm, or home, is assessed to the mortgager, therefore he (the said tax-payer) will escape the payment of taxes thereon, hugs a delusion to his soul that may cost him dearly ere he is aware. Jones loans Smith a thousand dollars upon bond and mortgage of his homestead, which, perhaps, may have been assessed at no more than eight hundred dollars. Now, while it is true that the mortgage is assessed to Jones, nevertheless as the taxes thereon are made a lien upon the premises, he need not trouble himself about the payment thereof. If Smith fails to pay the same, he will find himself saddled with extra costs; and if they are not finally paid, the premises will be sold, and bid in by Jones, leaving Smith out in the cold. And then instead of paying taxes on eight hundred dollars of valuation, he is now required to pay a thousand dollars mortgage, in addition to the taxes on a small assessment upon the premises mortgaged; for no assessor would be satisfied with the statement that they were mortgaged for their full cash value. That is how it is worked under our new constitution.

An Alleged Quarrel Between Grant and Blaine.

The quarrel between Grant and Blaine, as I hear it, says a correspondent of the Philadelphia Times, is very amusing, and more like two school boys than two great big men, who have now or have had the eyes of the whole country bent toward them. I will not vouch for the story, but this is the way it came to me: After the Chicago convention, smarting somewhat under his defeat, Blaine consoled himself by saying to some friends: "Well, I have beaten that fellow Grant, anyway." A little cold consolation like that ought not to be complained of. I know that after Sherman failed of nomination at Chicago he had some very severe things to say about Charley Foster—much more severe, indeed, than Blaine said about Grant; but it was in anger, and, no doubt, he long ago repented of his cholera. However, what Blaine said of Grant was kindly repeated to the latter, who became greatly incensed. This fact, in turn, was brought to Blaine. He could not believe it, and, being anxious to do the polite thing on his part and to show that he had no personal feeling against Grant, the next time he went to New York he called at Grant's hotel and sent his card—two cards, indeed, one to General and one to Mrs. Grant, with the name on each. To these the Grants paid not the slightest attention, although Blaine waited for more than a half hour for his answer. Not very long after that Grant came to Washington and was received by the United States senate. When the August body adjourned for that purpose there were two senators who did not greet the ex-president—one was Mr. Blaine and the other was Mr. Voorhees. They were down in the Senate restaurant eating some cold roast beef and drinking a glass of beer. The story still goes on to say that a few weeks later Mr. Blaine was again in New York and, having some business with a down-town banker, he strode into the latter's private office, as usual; unannounced. There sat Mr. Grant, not two feet off, and there stood the banker by his side. The eyes of the two distinguished men met for an instant, but not a word was spoken between them. Mr. Blaine at once said to the banker: "Mr. —, I wanted to see you a moment, but I see you are engaged, and I will call again." Then he turned and left, as cool as though he were leaving his dinner-table. They have never met since, but I understand that Grant is very angry. Well, the world will go along just the same.

Sudden Checking of Perspiration.

A Boston merchant, in "lending a hand" on board one of the ships on a windy day, found himself at the end of an hour and a half pretty well exhausted and perspiring freely. He sat down to rest, and engaging in conversation, time past faster than he was aware of. In attempting to rise, he found he was unable to do so without assistance. He was taken home and put to bed, where he remained two years; and for a long time afterward could only hobble about with the aid of a crutch. Less exposures than this have in constitutions not so vigorous resulted in inflammation of the lungs—"pneumonia"—ending in death in less than a week, or causing tedious rheumatism, to be a source of trouble for a lifetime. Multitudes of lives would be saved every year, and an incalculable amount of human suffering would be prevented, if parents would begin to explain to their children, at the age of three or four years, the danger which attends cooling off too quickly after exercise, or work, or play, or remaining exposed to the wind, or sitting at an open window or door, or pulling off any garment, even the hat or bonnet, while heated.

In the city of Dublin there are 24,000 families, averaging five members, who are each living in a single room. The death rate of the city is 40 per 1,000, which is equal to 60 per 1,000 in the tenement house districts. These two facts, the enormous number of families living in a single room and the high death rate, prove that the horrors and dangers of Irish distress have not been exaggerated. These families of five shut up each in a single room depend for support on wages of from ten to seventeen shillings a week.

The Central hotel, near the steamship dock is now open for the reception of guests, where the well known caterer, Mr. Anton Beloh will always be found ready to wait on his patrons. THE NINETY AND NINE.

There are ninety and nine who live and die
In want and hunger and cold,
That one may revel in luxury
And be lapped in its stinking fold.
The ninety and nine in hovels lie,
The one in a mansion with riches rare.
They toil in the fields, the ninety and nine
For the fruits of another's earth.
They dig and delve in the dusky mine,
And bring hidden treasures forth.
But the wealth released by their sturdy blows
To the hands of the one forever flows.
From the sweat of their brows the desert blooms,
And the forest before them falls.
Their labor has builded habitable homes,
And cities with lofty spires,
But the one owns cities and homes and lands,
And the ninety and nine have empty hands.
But the night so dreary and dark and long,
At last shall the morning bring,
And over the land the victor's song
Of the nine and nine shall ring,
And echo all from zone to zone,
Rejoice, for they shall have their own.

Horse Education.

In something written we have an indistinct recollection of having made reference to a general disposition among boys in their teens, as well as boys of maturer years, to enlighten and bless the world with their profound knowledge of the horse and his history. Our books and newspapers are full of this kind of literature, and it varies in style from the production of the child at school, commencing with: The horse has four legs and a tail; up to the eloquent tribute of the scholar when he quotes from Job: That his neck is clothed with thunder and the glory of his nostrils is terrible. He smelleth the battle afar off, the thunder of the captains and the shouting. Between these two extremes of the child at his first school composition, and the professional literature, we have every grade of pretension, and each professing to have mastered the whole subject. As we approach the close of this nineteenth century, we begin to look for something better in this department of knowledge from those who assume to instruct. And it is to be found in Kendall's Treatise on the horse, sent by mail to any person for twenty-five cents, postage paid. Apply to THE ASTORIAN office, or address D. C. Ireland, Astoria, Oregon.

Marvel not that I say unto you, ye must pay the printer. Whosoever neglecteth to pay the printer, hath not eternal life abiding in him. Who hath sorrow, who hath woe, who hath the nightmare? They who forget to render unto the printer his just dues. If a man live many years and payeth not for THE ASTORIAN, behold he shall not die in peace till he hath restored to the printer that which he hath withheld.

By a recent postal decision men can actually make money by getting their bills and statements of accounts printed. Statements of accounts and bills of sale when made out on paper having printed headings, can be sent by mail for one cent, if the envelope is left unsealed; whereas, if it is made out on unprinted paper, it will cost three cents. Thus by patronizing THE ASTORIAN two cents can be saved on every bill or statement that is sent out through the mail.
