

TELESCOPED. PUNGENT GRAINS OF SENSE BROUGHT HOME TO THE AS- TORIAN FROM TOO MANY WAYS TO BE MENTIONED.

PEN. SCISSORS AND PASTE.
A foreign German newspaper has discovered that small as may appear the resources of typography, they can nevertheless lay claim to the following graphic attempt at portrait painting, expressive of

A scientific writer on the subject of snow says: "Many of the most remarkable figures are produced by the softening away of primary points and edges during incipient dissolution and by the deposits of amorphous accretions upon the primary axes and lines of the crystals." Wonder if he ever felt the incipient accretions of a globular wad of amorphous crystals strike him on the cerebellum and then slowly dissolve down the back of his neck, while a peal of boyish laughter echoed around the corner of the Astoria market?

Miss Kittrell, who has been acting as clerk of the Nevada legislature, had to take the usual oath before being admitted to the office. She got along all right until they made her swear never to bear arms against the United States. Then she faltered.

An article is going the rounds of the press entitled "Who are the Boers?" We know who they are, says Bill Nye of the Boomerange. "They are men who write long articles with violet ink, on both sides of the paper, entitled Distinctive Numerical Twoness of Segregated Twiceness, and then stand around in your way to see you print them."

The man who wrote Silver Threads Among the Gold is making broom handles at Shiocton, Wisconsin. We publish this so that little boys who have an ambition to write popular ballads may know how the mighty stream of wealth comes pouring in to the author.

As a result of the long, cold winter, very few town cows in Laramie are fit for beef. Bill says they would make better transparent slides for a stereopticon. If they were more sedentary in their habits at less anti-fat and did not stay out so late nights, they would gradually get quite stout and robust, and would not look so much like a suspension bridge as they do.

From the New York World: "One Mr. DeYoung having shot Kalleck senior, and Kalleck junior having murdered Mr. DeYoung, another Mr. DeYoung is thinking of killing Kalleck. Of course the authorities will act as favorably in the case of the next murderer as they did in the case of the last one. The general government might perhaps encourage this California industry by a liberal system of subsidies."

It is stated on authority of the Modern Argo that Gen. Miller, the new senator from California, arose in one of Moody's meetings and asked prayers for himself in his endeavor to lead a christian life in Washington. Mr. Moody shook his head sadly, but said he would try.

A fat steer killed in Hamburg, Pennsylvania, the other day, contained, among other things, a freight car seal. We presume that the car itself, with the engineer, the brakeman, the conductor, and the tramp on the brake-beam had been digested.

If you want a good hot cup of tea, coffee, or chocolate after your nights fishing call at the Fair Wind chop house where you will get it, and don't you forget it.

Dixfield, Maine, October 20th, 1880. Dr. E. J. Kendall & Co., Gents:—Please find inclosed 25 cents for revised edition of your horse book. I have tried your Kendall's Spavin Cure and it has done all you claim for it. By using one-half a bottle it entirely cured the lameness and removed the bunch. Yours truly, FRANK STANLEY.

Hon. T. H. Brents.

Walla-walla Statesman, 19th.
Hon. T. H. Brents arrived from Washington last evening overland via Kelton, much fatigued from the journey, which at this time of the year is anything but pleasant and refreshing. Our reporter called upon the honorable gentleman and was received in the open and cordial manner for which Mr. Brents is noted. He said that he felt sore from his trip having had a very tedious and tiresome journey. Mr. Brents says the people living west of the Rocky mountains should be thankful for the mildness of our winter in comparison with that in the great west, where miles upon miles of the best prairie farming land is one glare of ice, and where stock has died by the hundreds of thousands. The difference in the climate is more noticeable to the traveler who leaves the storms and ice blockade, and drops over to the western slope where the land is covered with its carpet of verdure and the trees are laden with blossoms. In speaking of appropriations for the internal improvement of this territory, Mr. Brents says that one object of his was to impress congress that the Columbia river belonged mostly or entirely to Oregon, and that any improvements or appropriations made for that stream could not justly be called an appropriation for Washington territory, by which argument he succeeded in getting an appropriation of $15,000 for the Snake river. We then questioned our delegate as to what had been done in regard to the admittance of Washington territory into the sisterhood of states. Mr. Brents said that he had put his bill in and had talked the matter up as much as possible, but beyond that nothing was done, as congress during the last term was engrossed with national affairs of more political moment. But at the same time it is hoped that the bill will be brought up next winter touching this matter. Among the congressmen and senators Washington territory is looked upon as a country with a great future before it, and if anything, it is looked upon as a greater country than any state on the Pacific, on account of the certainty and extent of her cereal resources. It only wants to be opened up by the iron horse to develop it to its fullest extent.

Jim Bowie.
The American criminal vocabulary contains two phrases, with a historical meaning, which are better known to old persons than to the younger ones. These are the "Bowie-knife," and "Lynchng." The term "Lynchng" is easily explained. It means hanging without law. That terrible implement, the Bowie-knife, has shed so much human blood and taken so many valuable lives, that an anecdote from the Chicago Inter Ocean, concerning its origin and inventor, will be interesting. We copy:

A tough citizen was James Bowie, but he had a sense of justice in his heart that gave him a character among those who detested his murderous ways. He made the original Bowie-knife while lying upon a sick-bed, laid up with wounds received in a controversy, and fashioned the weapon for purposes of revenge. It was made of a large saw-mill file. A story is told of him in Texas. He entered a church in one of the new towns and found a clergyman trying to preach to an audience, part of whom were anxious to listen and the other part bent upon sport. When he announced his text and attempted to preach, one man brayed in imitation of an ass, another hooted like an owl, etc. He disliked to be driven from his purpose, and attempted again to preach, but was stopped by the same species of interruption. He stood silent and still, not knowing whether to vacate the pulpit or not. Finally a man whom he did not know arose, and with stentorian voice, said: "Men, this man has come here to preach to you. You need preaching to, and he shall preach to you! The next man that disturbs him shall fight me. My name is Jim Bowie." The preacher said that after this announcement he never had a more attentive and respectful audience, so much influence had Bowie over that reckless and dangerous element.

Two Ex-Presidents.
San Francisco Call.
General Diaz, ex-president of Mexico, was cordially received in Galveston a few days since, by Col. Otis, of the United States army, and about the same time Grant was received in the city of Mexico. Gen. Diaz, as the Mexican ruler who prepared the way for American enterprise in Mexico, is naturally popular with Americans; but Gen. Grant does not seem to have inspired the Mexican people with that confidence his purpose should entitle him to. The Mexicans probably know Grant as a great military leader, and possibly associate his present purposes with some future intention of conquest. On this there is little to fear from Gen. Grant as from any civilian, as he is known to be a man who takes up the sword reluctantly and lays it down when its work is accomplished. It is a matter of regret that jealousies of this nature should retard the progress of enterprises which will be mutually advantageous to both nations. There has never been a time when public opinion in the United States was less inclined to conquest than at present. Friendly business and social relations with our neighbors, in the north and south, are all the mass of the people desire.

Horse Education.
In something written we have an indistinct recollection of having made reference to a general disposition among boys in their teens, as well as boys of maturer years, to enlighten and bless the world with their profound knowledge of the horse and his history. Our books and newspapers are full of this kind of literature, and it varies in style from the production of the child at school, commencing with: The horse has four legs and a tail; up to the eloquent tribute of the scholar when he quotes from Job: That his neck is clothed with thunder and the glory of his nostrils is terrible. He smelleth the battle afar off, the shouting of the captains and the thunder. Between these two extremes of the child at his first school composition, and the professional literature, we have every grade of pretention, and each professing to have mastered the whole subject. As we approach the close of this nineteenth century, we begin to look for something better in this department of knowledge from those who assume to instruct. And it is to be found in Kendall's Treatise on the horse, sent by mail to any person for twenty-five cents, postage paid. Apply to THE ASTORIAN office, or address D. C. Ireland, Astoria, Oregon.

Peruvian Bitters.
Cinchona Barks
The Count Cinchon was the Spanish Viceroy in Peru in 1638. The Countess, his wife, was prostrated by an intermittent fever, from which she was freed by the use of the native remedy, the Peruvian bark, or, as it was called in the language of the country, "Quinquina." Grateful for her recovery, on her return to Europe in 1652, she introduced the remedy in Spain, where it was known under various names, until Linnaeus called it Cinchona, in honor of the lady who had brought them that which was more precious than the gold of the Incas. To this day, after a lapse of two hundred and fifty years, science has given us nothing to take its place. It effectually cures a morbid appetite for stimulants, by restoring the natural tone of the stomach. It attacks excessive love of liquor as it does a fever, and destroys both alike. The powerful tonic virtue of the Cinchona is preserved in the Peruvian Bitters, which are as effective against malarial fever to-day as they were in the days of the old Spanish Viceroys. We guarantee the ingredients of these bitters to be absolutely pure, and of the best known quality. A trial will satisfy you that this is the best bitter in the world. The proof of the pudding is in the eating; and we willingly abide this test. For sale by all druggists, grocers and liquor dealers. Order it.

Mothers! Mothers!! Mothers!!!
Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with the excruciating pain of cutting teeth? If so, go at once and get a bottle of Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup, it will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately—depend upon it; there is no mistake about it. There is not a mother on earth who has ever used it, who will not tell you at once that it will regulate the bowels, and give rest to the mother, and relief and health to the child, operating like magic. It is perfectly safe to use in all cases, and pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States. Sold everywhere, 25 cents a bottle.

Premature Loss of Hair
Nowadays may be entirely prevented by the use of Burnett's Cocaine. It has been used in thousands of cases where the hair was coming out in handfuls, and has never failed to arrest its decay; it promotes a healthy and vigorous growth, and it is at the same time untrivalled as a soft and glossy dressing for the hair. Burnett's flavoring extracts are the best, strongest and most healthful. Sold everywhere.

Have Wistar's balsam of wild cherry always at hand. It cures coughs, colds, bronchitis, whooping cough, croup, influenza, consumption, and all throat and lung complaints. 50 cents and $1 a bottle.

Horse owners can not afford to overlook the wonderful success of Kendall's Spavin Cure. See advertisement in another column.

Two Ex-Presidents.

Do hogs pay? asks an agricultural correspondent. We know of some that don't. They subscribe for a paper, read it for a few years for nothing, and then send it back to the publisher with the P. M.'s inscription, "refused." Such hogs as that pay nothing to anybody, if they can help it.

Goods speak for themselves, but it is only after they are bought that they can do so. An object in advertising is to induce people to buy them and test them. If goods speak for themselves, a good advertisement may also speak for the goods.

Some men can see things only retrospectively. Instead of looking forward to what they might do they only look back to what they might have done. They learn from experience, after it has become a little late in the day. Such men are the non-advertisers. "Book farmers" were once despised by the self-called "practical" farmers, but when the latter saw the farmer's crops, they changed their minds.

"I am doing a good enough business without advertising." No doubt you are doing well enough for your present needs, but do you forget the panics, the exciting elections, the times of war or pestilence, or any of those many causes which create dull times of business? These must be calculated for and discounted if you would bridge them over. One must make more than he needs, to make a fortune, and advertising is a powerful auxiliary in money-making.

No man should deprive his wife and family of a good local paper. They do not get out from home to learn the news as does the husband and father, and the paper serves to relieve the otherwise lonely house of his absence. It is the worst possible economy to deprive the family of a pleasure so easily and cheaply procured. And yet there are those who say that they are too poor to take a paper; but they are not too poor to spend twenty cents the price of a paper every day for whisky and tobacco.

It costs less to print advertisements than to send out salesmen. A good advertisement is seen and read by more people in one day, than most salesmen call on in a year.

An advertisement tells its own story. It makes no mistakes, as a solicitor might do, and states exactly what the merchant wants to say, neither more nor less. Advertisements are honest and faithful servants.
