Heavy Blasting.

On Tuesday afternoon 40,000 cubic yards of rock, on the line of the Oregon Railway and Navigation company, between The Dalles and Cascades, were removed at a single blast. The Oregonian says: A little after noon the great blast in the Promontory at the upper end of Shell rock, twelve miles above the Cascades, was fired. A party including Chief-engineer Thielsen, Capt. George Ainsworth, Col. Gillespie and several others, among whom were a number of ladies, left Portland in the morning to witness it. Everything had been got in readiness, and when the steamers Mountain Queen and R. E. Thompson, one of which carried the visiting party while the other was making the regular trip to The Dalles, arrived near and blew the whistle, the mine was exploded. Chambers had been run into the cliff from nearly opposite sides, and charged with 14,000 pounds of powder. The cliff was of ball-salt, projecting into the river, above which it stood at the height of about 150 feet. The extent of its base was about 200 feet, and the lateral depth of rock which it was desired to move was seventy-five to eighty feet. The wind was setting strongly up stream, and as the spectators were some distance below the promontory, the shock of the explosion was to them scarcely perceptible. But the sight was a splendid one. There was a great flame, a great rolling smoke, and the prodigious mass of material was seen to rise and shoot out into the river, some of it being thrown perhaps half way across. The boats steamed up, and it was evident at once that the shot had been entirely successful. Messrs. Thielsen and Hallett found the result in the highest degree satisfactory. About 40,000 cubic yards of rock had been blown off into the river, and the work of constructing the railroad at that point made comparatively easy. Rapid progress is now being made all along the line, and there is every reason to expect that by September the rails will be laid from the Cascades to The Dalles.

There is a crematory in South Boston in the form of a lime kiln. Tramps crawl into it because it is warm, go comfortably to sleep, are overcome by gas, and finally are burned to a crisp when the fire is freshened in the morning. Sixteen lives have been thus lost within a few years. In a little while other New England towns and cities which suffer from the tramp nuisance may see the advantage of constructing similar traps. It must be admitted that the South Boston trap has proved a success.

The election of a senator in New Hampshire has been deferred.

Commissioner Raum says that he expects a breaking out of moonshiners all over the country where illicit whisky is made. The manufacturers of that article keep quiet, he says, while congress is in session, but get to work as soon as that body adjourns.

They have been having a terrible time with the small pox in Honolulu. The number of persons quarantined was between two and three thousand. The disease raged five months, and during that time the cases in hospital averaged about a hundred and thirty, and the deaths about twenty a week. The expenses run up to over a hundred thousand dollars, having averaged almost a thousand dollars a day. In the city sixty-six persons were quarantined, and ninety-eight special policemen were employed to watch them. Besides these, there were the general hospital and quarantine ground attendants, making a very big company, and an enormous expense for a city of only 15,000 inhabitants. The condition of affairs, the worry of mind, prostration of business, etc., can scarcely be imagined.

The Pilgrim Templars from New England recently met a knightly reception at the National Capital; Washington, Columbia and Potomac commanderies uniting with De Molay commandery in honoring the visitors. We are informed that the reception at the Masonic Temple "was one of the most brilliant gatherings that has ever been given in Washington." This may be accounted for by casting the eye over the list of persons present, among whom, so far as our acquaintance extends, a feeling of welcome, even to the most distant stranger, would be irresistible. The Republican says: "The inspiring music of Donchis orchestra kept the dancing up to a late hour, and when the party separated the remark of one fair Bay State girl, said as she wrapped around her curly hair the fleecy thing which answered for a hood: 'I have danced every set and every round dance, and I never had so good a time in my life,' was fully endorsed by all."
