

The Daily Astorian.

ASTORIA, OREGON: THURSDAY, JULY 7, 1881.

Not Out of Danger.

The Oregonian has kept readers thoroughly informed concerning the condition of President Garfield since the National horror, and THE ASTORIAN, as well as other Pacific Northwest journals, acknowledge many favors from the Oregonian in this respect.

English Parliament.

Oregonians should not growl, when the Salem assembly adjourns to attend a horse race. The precedent has been followed in England. It seems odd to hear that so grave and dignified a body as the English house of parliament should adjourn to attend a horse race—but so it is.

Suicides Increase.

The alarming increase noticeable in the number of suicides seems to demand the attention of christians and philanthropists. It is not attributable to any general distress or sudden calamity. In many cases the causes seem absurdly insignificant.

Good and Evil.

We have been reading numerous predictions of astronomers, etc., concerning the tremendous disasters to occur, but which did not; last month and in April, because of the groupings of the planets.

Punishment of Bribers.

The legislature of Pennsylvania have by recent act, decreed severe penalties against those who give or receive bribes or vote illegally. Any candidate for office who is convicted of bribing an elector, or corruptly influencing his actions, is liable to a fine of $300 and three months' imprisonment.

Escape of Mrs. Garfield.

A Washington dispatch gives an account of the breaking of a piston rod of the train on which Mrs. Garfield went to Washington.

Arthur's Deep Emotion.

A correspondent in Washington called on Vice President Arthur Tuesday afternoon and found him sitting thoughtfully and alone on a sofa in one of Senator Jones' parlors. Everything around was in confusion.
