....OCT. 1, 1881 J. F. HALLORAN.

Salutatory.

In assuming charge of THE As-TORIAN we desire first to express our thanks for the congratulations and expressions of good will with hope that none of our friends will ever have reason to utter contrary expressions. It is our intention to thers the consistency that it claims for itself. We do not expect to gree with everyone, but what is said shall be so said that it not only can be understood but that it cannot be misunderstood, and in such a way that those who differ from us can at least respect the opinions uttered. The paper shall Coast and Geodetic survey, for the work for the good and material

Whatever is copied from other papers shall be duly credited, and our columns shall always be open to anyone who has anything to say on any question of public import or general welfare.

THE Nez Perce News suggests that when Mr. Villard gets to Walla Walla, it would be a sensible idea for the merchants of each of the towns in the upper country to send a representative to interview him on the subject of reducing freights and to make known to him the hardships and disadvantages under which they labor in the matter of delinquent freights.

With reversed column rules comes every exchange clad in somber habiliments; all with culogistic phrase, a sober symphony of sorrow for the dead. The menument fund is assuming gigantic proportions, and yet a fairer shrine and more fitting statue shall be found in the regretful remembrance and hallowed memory that fills the heart of every member of the human family that knows of the sad event.
