Presbyterian Social.

The social given at the residence of Mrs. D. K. Warren last Friday evening, was an occasion to be remembered with pleasure by all who attended. Notwithstanding the stormy evening there was a very large attendance. Part of the time was spent in games, singing, and refreshments, but by far the pleasantest part was spent in listening to a musical concert given by Prof. A. L. Francis on the violin, D. A. McIntosh on the cornet, and Miss Nora Wilson on the piano. Miss Kate Flavel sang some very sweet ballads accompanied on the piano by her sister. The following ladies and gentlemen were present: Mr. and Mrs. Dr. Tuttle, Mr. and Mrs. F. D. Winston, Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Rozorth, Mr. and Mrs. C. Brown, Dr. and Mrs. F. Crang, Mr. and Mrs. Clough, Mr. and Mrs. Chienhart, Mrs. Grimes, Mrs. M. Rogers, Mrs. L. Hartwig, Mrs. A. Van Dusen, Mrs. Howe, Mrs. Paugburn, Mrs. Curran, Mrs. J. Stevens, Mrs. M. Stevens, Mrs. P. Richardson, T. W. Eaton, Edgar Clough, Rev. J. V. Milligan, E. C. Holden, Eben Rogers, Geo. Stevens, Wm. Douglas, Scott Rozorth, George Abernethy, Allen Thrall.

A Secret of the Sea.

"Yes," said the mate as we strolled down the city front, "there are indeed many queer things occurring on the ocean. I think the queerest thought that I ever remember hearing of was told me by a young fellow a few months ago. He wrote it out for me afterward and put in a good deal better English than I could. Let's go down to the ship and I'll hunt it out for you." And he did. The MS. was badly stained, and in some places almost illegible. "I had just shipped on board the — at Sydney," said he "and after the first bustle and hurry of departure, and a dirty night at sea, turned out on Thursday morning feeling a bit queerish but determined to do what I could. The first days of the voyage we had rough weather, but on Sunday morning the sun came up smiling. Decks had been washed down, and both passengers and crew were rigging themselves out in smarter tops than usual, in honor of our first sunny, quiet Sunday at sea, when one of the men on the fore-castle sang out: 'A sail!' It was the first that we had seen since we had fairly got away from Sydney, and therefore it excited unusual interest. The captain bade the man at the wheel change the course a point to the westward, that we might make sure of speaking the welcome stranger; and when we came on deck again after breakfast every glass on board was leveled at her, and the signal-box was got out in readiness. We made the stranger out to be a low black brig, with a round stern, a white quarter-rail, and very rakish masts—the lower masts painted white. The sparker was brailed up, but all other canvases, except studdensails, was set—even a cotton main sky-sail. The brig flew no bunting of any kind; but something in the cut of her double top sails, and the build of her hull and white deck-houses, led the experts on board our ship to pronounce her a Yankee. In vain did we run up our fluttering lines of gay, parti-colored little signal-flags. Up and down they went with good-tempered patience, but the brig's gaff still obstinately continued dumb. Not a man or boy could we get a glimpse of on board her; and the way in which she was sailed was most un-Yankee-like, unless there was some piratical purpose in it. Now she was kept full, now she fell off her course with flapping canvas, and sometimes she slewed round, head on to the wind, and she was regularly taken aback. Then presently she would round, fill again, and slant off on another tack. If vessels could get tipsy—and one has heard of a tight ship—you might have said that the brig had taken too much grog on board. Her remarkable maneuvers puzzled us sorely at first, but presently our captain said, contemptuously: 'Pirates! Not much of that, I reckon. It's my belief that every one on board is upset. They were drinking 'Sweet-hearts and wives' a little too deep last night, I guess, and now they're all skulking from the clipper to the cabin-boy. Mr. —, to chief officer, lower away one of the quarter-boats, and board her. I'll stand off and on till you've found out what's up. 'There's room for you, if you like to come,' said — to me as he went over the side; and I followed him down into the boat.

A Chinese Fish.

It is stated that the gourami, a Cochinchina fish, never introduced on this coast, may be expected here shortly. A correspondence on the subject of bringing that species to California was entered into last year by Professor Baird, at Washington, and the Societe d'Acclimation of Paris. The best manner of transportation was to be followed, to insure the successful arrival of the fish. Persistent efforts, which finally succeeded, had been made year after year by the Societe d'Acclimation to introduce the Cochinchina fish into France. Professor Baird having obtained all the necessary information concerning the treatment of the fish while on the way, and the Oriental Steamship company of San Francisco to take charge of them. The company instructed their agent at Hongkong to follow all instructions laid down to keep the fish alive, which would be received from the agent of the French line of steamers. They are expected to arrive soon on any steamer of that line.

The Opulet.

The opulet, one of the wonders of the sea, is about as large as the German aster, having numerous long, glossy, petals tipped with rose-color. The opulet clings to the rocks, but the petals wave about in the water, looking innocent and lovely. But the instant a foolish little fish touches one of the rosy tips, he is struck with a poison as fatal to him as lightning. He immediately becomes numb, and in a moment beautiful arms wrap themselves around him, and he is drawn into the huge, greedy mouth, and is seen no more. Then the lovely arms unclose, and wave again in the water, looking so innocent and harmless as though they had never touched a fish.
