A Tinge of Romance About Public Men.

Wealth and family influence have as yet not done much in this country towards bringing out or insuring a career for public men. The son of a Lord and the heir to his title does not find much difficulty in obtaining a seat in the House of Commons. He is brought forward by his friends. The family influence, wealth and social position are enlisted for his success. It is a rare circumstance in the United States that a son succeeds his father as a member of Congress, or gets there at all. The poverty of Henry Clay, as a boy, did not hinder him from being one of the most conspicuous public characters the country has produced. It was always reckoned a circumstance which made for his popularity that he had been a poor boy, without family influence or powerful friends. Lincoln knew the poverty and privation of frontier life. When he became a conspicuous public character, it pleased the multitude that he had once split rails, and had from the humble condition worked his way slowly and patiently to success.

same reason. He taught school as a means for procuring enough to help him along with his own education.

In England, the wealth and the family influence, which would have been used to push the political fortunes of young men, would have been a hindrance in the cases cited at home. Wealth never has greater potency than now in this country. But it does not insure conspicuous careers for young men. It cannot work out the "succession," or designate this or that young man as in the line for political promotion. The poor young man will fight the battle much as others have fought it for the last hundred years. The democratic idea is still cherished that the old and hard road, where poverty besets the young man, is a very good one to travel. When he has conquered, the popular estimation gives him a large credit for having had the pluck to fight his own way to success.

The Ohio Legislature Eighty Years Ago.

Michael Baldwin, the irrepressible and incorrigible, was no more dignified, abstemious, or moral in his position as Speaker of the first Ohio House of Representatives than he had been in former years or lesser stations. He presided over the Chamber in 1803, 1804 and 1805. It is a matter of tradition that for his own pecuniary benefit, and for the entertainment of those among the Legislators who had a penchant for gaming, he established in his rooms the game of "vingt-et-un," himself acting as banker and dealer, and as a matter of course winning more frequently than any of the other players. On one occasion, after much drinking and a late sitting at the gaming-table, Baldwin found himself in possession not only of all the money of his companions, but of many of their watches. In the morning the House of Representatives was found to be without a quorum; but Baldwin, accustomed to heavy drinking and late hours, was in his place back of the Speaker's desk. Rapping savagely with his gavel, he demanded the roll call of the House, and then sent the Sergeant-at-arms out with orders to bring in the delinquent members. After an hour or so that functionary returned, followed by about a dozen members of the Ohio Legislature, whose bloodshot eyes, suffused faces, unsteady, shambling steps, and general air of shamefacedness indicated the late hours they had kept, and their heavy indulgences. With much austerity of manner, Baldwin reprimanded the tardy members, reminded them of the cost to which the infant State was subjected by payment of their per diems, and was proceeding to farther elaborate his censure on their late arrival and the consequent delay of legislation, when one of the delinquents, exasperated beyond control, cried out, "Hold on there, Mr. Speaker. hold on! How could we tell what time it was, when the Speaker of the House had all of our watches?"

Oregon Pacific Railroad.

Col. T. Edgerton Hogg, who has been spending considerable time in the East completing negotiations for the construction of the Oregon Pacific railroad, returned last evening on the steamship California. He states that his arrangements to build the road and to form Eastern connections with the center of the Willamette valley, are completed and sure of success, as the company he represents has the money in hand to push forward the enterprise. While others claim to be the originators of the project of steamships coming to this coast to carry away our wheat, he says there are 11 steamers afloat laden with English steel rails destined for this coast, and that three of these, now overdue, have on board 10,000 tons of rails for the Oregon Pacific road. These steamers were induced to make this new departure upon his representation and guarantee that they should be assured of a return load. He states that he will demonstrate the fact that freight can be handled much more cheaply than it is now done on existing routes, and that the producers will be greatly relieved of fully one-half of the freight rates of which they complain. He will have two overland connections, one of which is to be with the Union Pacific in the vicinity of Boise City, while he declined to state where the other is contemplated. He does not profess to be working on his own responsibility, but says that he is operating with other companies, and that the public may be assured of success. He also states that the work undertaken by himself and associates is of equal, if not of greater magnitude than that begun by the present transportation company now engaged in constructing roads in the great Northwest. Col. Hogg speaks with the greatest confidence of the prospects of his company, and from what he states we feel assured that Oregon will soon have competing railroad lines within her borders. It is to competition that the people of the Northwest must look for relief and it matters not where those roads run to or by whom they are constructed. The more roads we have the more competition there will be, and the cheaper we can get our products to market the greater will be the profit to the producer, and the more inducement we can offer for people to come to this coast. We are glad to be able to state with so much confidence that Col. Hogg and his associates will be able to carry to successful completion their proposed plans, and should these steamships, now on their way with the rails, find this profitable voyage, it may open a new era in the near future in our methods of getting wheat to market. We hope the Oregon Pacific will prove a success.—Portland Standard.

Nothing Short of Unmistakable Benefits.

Counted upon tens of thousands of sufferers could originate and maintain the reputation which AYER'S SERRAPILLOLA enjoys. It is a compound of the best vegetable alteratives, with the iodides of Potassium and Iron, and is the most effective of all remedies for scurvy, mercurial, or blood disorders. Uniformly successful and certain in its remedial effects, it produces rapid and complete cures of Scrophulous Sores, Boils, Humors, Pimples, Eruptions, Skin Diseases and all disorders rising from impurity of the blood. By its invigorating effects it always relieves and often cures Liver Complaints, Female Weaknesses and Irregularities, and is a potent renewer of vitality. For purifying the blood it has no equal. It tones up the system, restores and preserves the health, and imparts vigor and energy. For forty years it has been in extensive use, and is today the most available medicine for the suffering sick, anywhere.
