WHAT GOES TO THE MOON.

George Francis Train recently gave the following advice to some college young men:

You want some good advice. It has ruined many a man; but may not harm you, because you will not follow it. Rise early; be abstemious; be frugal; attend to your own business, and never trust it to another; be not afraid to work, and diligently, too, with your own hands; treat everyone with civility and respect, good manners insure success; accomplish what you undertake; decide, then persevere; diligence and industry overcome all difficulties; never be mean—rather give than take an odd shilling; never postpone till the morrow what can be done to-day; never expect wealth from any source but labor; honesty is not only the best policy but the only policy; commence at the first round and keep climbing; make your word as good as your bond; seek knowledge to plan, enterprise to execute, honesty to govern all; never trade beyond your stock; never give too large credit; time is money; make few promises; keep your secrets; live within your income; sobriety above all things; luck is a word that does not apply to a successful man; not too much caution—slow but sure is the thing; the highest monuments are built piece by piece—step by step we mount the pyramids; be bold—be resolute when the clouds gather; difficulties are surmounted by opposition; self-confidence, self-reliance is your capital, your conscience the best monitor; never be over-sanguine; but don't underrate your own abilities; don't be discouraged—ninety-nine may say no, the hundredth, yes; take off your coat, roll up your sleeves, and don't be afraid of manual labor; America is large enough for all; strike out for the West—the seashore cities are too crowded; the best letter of introduction is your own energy; lean on yourself when you walk; keep good company—the Spaniards say, if you lie down with dogs you will get up with fleas; keep out of politics, unless you are sure to win;—you are never sure to win, so keep out.

Nursery Tale.

One day an unfortunate editor, hard at work trying to devise a plan to make delinquent subscribers pay their dues, was called upon by a shoemaker who dropped in to give the editor some valuable hints on running a newspaper. The editor, overjoyed at the opportunity, gave the man his best cane-bottom chair, handed him a fresh cigar and listened attentively. Quoth the shoemaker as he lit the weed: "Your paper needs a hundred improved features. You don't grasp the topics of the day by the right handle; you don't set the locals in the right kind of type; your news is too one-sided, even the paper itself is poorly manufactured, not thick enough and of too chalky a white. You don't run enough matter and what you do run ain't of the right sort. Your ideas about protective tariff are infernally foolish and your stand on the internal improvement was bad, bad. I tell you these things because I want to see you succeed. I tell you as a friend. I don't take your paper myself, but I see it once in a while and as a paper is a public affair I suppose I have as good a right to criticize anybody. If a man wants to give me advice I let him; I'm glad to have him, in fact."

"That's exactly it," said the editor kindly; "I always had a dim idea of my shortcomings, but never had them so clearly and convincingly set forth as by you. It is impossible to express my gratitude for the trouble you have taken not only to find out these facts, but to point them out also. Some people knowing all these things perhaps nearly as well as you, are mean enough to keep them to themselves. Your suggestions came in a most appropriate time, I have wanted somebody to lean on, as it were, for some weeks. Keep your eye on the paper and when you see a weak spot come up."

The shoemaker left, happy to know that his suggestions had been received with such a Christian spirit. Next day just as he was finishing a boot, the editor came in, and picking up the mate, remarked:

"I want to tell you how that boot strikes me. In the first place, the leather is poor; the stitches in the sole are too wide apart and in the uppers too near the edge. These uppers will go to pieces in two weeks. It's all wrong, my friend, putting poor leather in the heels and smoothing it over with grease and lamp black. Everybody complains of your boots; they don't last; the legs are too short, the toes too narrow and the instep too high. How you can have the gall to charge twelve dollars for such boots beats me. Now, I tell you this as a friend, because I like to see you succeed. Of course I don't know any more about shoemaking than you do about a newspaper, but still I take an interest in you because you are so well disposed to me, in fact—"

Here the exasperated cobbler grabbed a lapstone and the editor gained the street followed by old knives, pinners, hammers and awls, sent after him by the wrathful cobbler, who on regaining the seat swore by the nine gods that no impudent, lopsided idiot should ever come round trying to teach him his trade.—Carson Appeal.

The Ladies' Land League of Dublin, which has branches in every part of Ireland, is more divided by the Lord Lieutenant and Secretary Foster than the "No Rent" manifesto of the male leaders. Trouble is fanned by the deliberations of the fair leaguers. Premier Gladstone can arrest men and throw them into Kilmainham Jail, but the arrest of women is an entirely different thing. They send down the traditions of wrong and suffering to their grandchildren, and such traditions work revolutions in the hereafter.

PACE EXPLORERS.

Better it were to sit still by the sea,
Leaving somebody and satisfied—
Better it were to grow babes on the knee,
To anchor you down for all your days—
Than wander and wander in all these ways,
Land forgotten and love denied.
Better sit still where born, I say,
Wed one sweet woman and love her well,
Laugh with your neighbors, live in their way,
Be it never so simple, The lumber the home,
The nuder, indeed, to bear your part,
Love and be loved with all your heart,
Drink sweet waters and dream in a spell,
Share your delights and divide your tears;
Love and be loved in the old cast way,
From the west to the east and the whole world wide;
When they lived where their fathers had Lived and died—
Lived and so loved for a thousand years,
Better it were for the world, I say—
Better, indeed, for a man's own good—
That he should sit down where he was born,
Be it land of sand or oil and crown,
Valley of poppies or bleak northland,
White sea border or great black wood,
Of bleak white winter, or inland sweet May,
Or city of smoke or plain of the sun,
—Than wander the world as I have done,
Breaking the heart into bits of clay,
And leaving it scattered on every hand.
—Joseph Miller.

Peruvia Bitters.

Quinine and Iron
The Count Chelona was the Spanish Viceroy in Peru in 1633. His Countess, his wife, was prostrated by an intermittent fever, from which she was freed by the use of the native remedy, the Peruvia Bitter, or, as it was called in the country, "Quinina." General for her recovery, on her return to Europe in 1632, she introduced the remedy in Spain, where it was known under various names, until Linnæus called it Chelona, in honor of the lady who had brought them that which was more precious than the gold of the Indies. To this day, after a lapse of two hundred and fifty years, science has given us nothing to take its place. It cures all the various forms of malarial fever, by restoring the natural tone of the stomach. It attacks excessive bile of humor as it does a fever, and destroys both alike. The powerful tonic virtue of the Chelona is preserved in the Peruvia Bitters, which are as effective against malarial fever to-day as they were in the days of the old Spanish Viceroys. We guarantee the ingredients of these bitters to be absolutely pure, and of the best known quality. A trial will satisfy you that this is the best bitter in the world. "The proof of the pudding is in the eating," and we willingly abide this test. For sale by all druggists, grocers and liquor dealers. Order it!

By Universal Accord.

ALEX. CATHARTIC PILLS are the best of all purgatives for family use. They are the product of long, laborious, and successful chemical investigation, and their extensive use by physicians in their practice, and by all civilized nations, proves them the best and most effective purgative. In delicate and feeble cases they are especially valuable. In ordinary cases they are equally so. In delicate and feeble cases they are especially valuable. In ordinary cases they are equally so.
