No. 47.

CONDENSED WISDOM.

No man is at all times precisely equal to his own average.

What has been unjustly gained cannot be justly kept.

Whole communities may be insane as well as individuals.

About the only force some people have is the force of habit.

Flattery is like false money; it impoverishes those who receive it.

The only really bitter tears are those which are shed in solitude.

Read only such things as you can afford to store in memory's treasury.

We lose the peace of years when we hunt after the rapture of moments.

He who puts a bad construction on a good act reveals his own wickedness of heart.

If idleness does not produce vice or malevolence, it commonly produces melancholy.

Each man has an aptitude born with him to do some feat impossible to any other.

Modesty is to worth what shadows are in painting; she gives to it strength and relief.

Brains cannot be measured by the size of the head, nor eloquence by the extent of the mouth.

Bashfulness may sometimes exclude pleasure, but seldom opens any avenue to sorrow or remorse.

The hardest rock is made of the softest mud. Don't allow the sediment of habit to harden into vice.

It is wonderful to note the number of men who see the value of a thing after it is beyond their reach.

To acquire a few tongues is the task of a few years, but to be eloquent in one is the labor of a lifetime.

It always seems to me a sort of clever stupidity only to have one sort of talent—almost like a carrier pigeon.

We appreciate no pleasure unless we are occasionally deprived of them. Restraint is the golden rule of enjoyment.

Strive to impress on your children that the only disgrace attaching to honest work is the disgrace of doing it badly.

There is authority for the statement that a good name is better than riches, but those who have neither should strive for both.

Many persons who are ashamed to do manual labor themselves are not ashamed to cheat those who do it for them out of their wages.

When a party is in the minority its most active men are called leaders; when it is in the majority the same men are called "bosses."

All errors spring up in the neighborhood of some truth; they grow round about it, and for the most part derive their strength from such contiguity.

No man who has reached the age of three-score years and ten, would, upon reflection, be willing to rub out from his experience in life the sorrows which have softened his character, the mistakes which have taught him wisdom, or the wrong-doings which he has ever regretted, and which by his influences have been formed in the texture of his moral character.

A Persistent Gimlet Man.

"I should like to sell you a gimlet," said a care-worn looking man, as he walked into an office the other day.

"We have no use for one," replied the cashier.

"But you should always look into the misty future," went on the fiend demurely. "Next winter you will want to make holes in your boot heels, so you can get your skates on."

"I use club skates—no straps."

"You may want to screw some boards together sometime. The old-fashioned method of driving the screws in with a hammer is pernicious, as it deteriorates the tenacity of the fangs of the screw, as it were."

"Nothing to-day sir."

"This gimlet also acts as a cork-screw."

"I don't want it."

"It also may be used as a tack-hammer, a cigar-holder and a tooth-brush."

"I don't want it."

"It has an eraser, a pen, an inkstand, a table for computing compound interest, and a lunch-box attachment."

"I can't help it; I don't want it."

"I know you don't; you are one of those men that won't buy a gimlet unless it has a restaurant and trip to Europe and an Italian opera company attached. You're the kind of man who would live near an electric light to save a gas bill."

And the peddler walked out with his mental plumage on the perpendicular.

Polar Exploration.

In the current numbers of Nature the Editor thus comments on the effort now making to carry out the scheme of the late Lieutenant Weyprecht, the discoverer of Franz Josef Land, for the establishment of a ring of observations around the North Pole: "Many Arctic authorities are of opinion that the days of great and expensive national Polar expeditions are past, and that the money thus spent would be put to much better use by being devoted to the carrying on of a continuous series of observations. At various points around the Arctic area observatories will be established as near as practicable to the Pole, where a continuous series of observations will be taken, according to a common prearranged plan. These observations will be connected with meteorology in all its departments, with terrestrial magnetism, the aurora borealis, atmospheric electricity, the movements of the ice, biology, combined with geographical exploration where practicable. After a year or two of such observations we may then be able to compare and coordinate Polar conditions with those which prevail in regions further south. A vast array of data must necessarily be accumulated that cannot be turned to valuable account by science."

Our knowledge of the meteorology of the temperate zone can never be completed until we are well acquainted with Arctic conditions, and thus the work to be done at these observatories will have an important practical bearing. Not only so, but it is maintained that it is only when we have the knowledge which will be collected at these stations that we shall be in a condition to send out an expedition for the Pole itself with anything like scientific assurances of success. We cannot but regret, then, that England has no share in the scheme. The countries forming the International Association are Russia, Germany, Norway and Sweden, Denmark, Austria, the United States, and we believe Canada; France and Switzerland lent it their countenance, and Lieutenant Bove's Italian Antarctic expedition is to some extent affiliated to the Association. Stations are to be established on the north coast of Siberia, Novaya Zemlya, Spitzbergen, Jan Mayen island, the west coast of Greenland, Lady Franklin bay, and the neighborhood of Behring straits. The colony for Lady Franklin bay, sent out by the United States, has already, we believe, reached its destination, and the others will probably be all at work next year.

Shutting the Last Door.

The result of the election in New York must be regarded as quite peculiar. The Republicans elected their state ticket by a majority larger than usual in "off years," while the Democrats have secured possession of the Legislature, though the Republicans had considerable reserve strength in the Senate. This certainly indicates a very extraordinary condition of the public mind. The destruction of a persistent political myth may account for it.

For a long time it was held by certain parties that Conkling was in fact the Republican party of the Empire state. It was this gentleman who carried the state in the last Presidential election for the Republicans. If he "sulked in his tent" there was not the least chance for that organization in any contest. No attempt was ever made to analyze the influence which the ex-Senator was supposed to wield. Whenever he came out he delivered a speech, perhaps considerably in advance of the average stump effort. But it rarely contained anything that was specially new or convincing. Nor would it be possible for any public man in these times to do so, for there is no view of a public question which is not fully treated by the newspapers long before the orator can reach the ear of the multitude. If there was anything at all in this claim set up for Mr. Conkling it was that large numbers of Republicans were so dominated by him that they had no opinion until he spoke.

But this is something that is not true of our people in any section of the country. There may have been some office-holders, indebted to Mr. Conkling for their places, who hung on his words, but even they could not be depended upon except within certain very narrow limits. This powerful leader who, in a sense, was regarded as bearing somewhat the same relation to New York that Louis XIV. did to France, had no control in the councils of the party in the last campaign. His followers were in a minority in the Convention, and he declined himself to be present. But the Republicans carried the state for all that by a handsome majority at the very time that they allowed the Legislature to go by default. There was one chance for Mr. Conkling regarding his old place. The election of a Republican Legislature and the resignation of one of the present Senators from New York. But the Republicans, to all appearances, have shut the door pretty effectually. There is now no way by which Mr. Conkling can re-enter public life, except by the favor of the Administration.

Some years ago there were a number of army officers stopping at a hotel in Washington. Among them was a Capt. Emerson and a Capt. Jones. Emerson and Jones used to have a good deal of fun at the dinner table and elsewhere. One day at the dinner table, when the dining-hall was well filled, Capt. Jones finished his dinner first, got up and walked almost to the dining-hall door, when Emerson called to him in a loud voice: "Hello, Captain! see here; I want to speak to you a minute." The Captain turned and walked back to the table, and bent over him, when Emerson whispered: "I wanted to ask you how far you would have gone if I had not spoken to you?" The Captain never changed a muscle, but straightened up and put his fingers into his vest pockets and said: "Captain Emerson, I don't know of a man in the world I would rather lend $5 to than you, but the fact is I haven't a cent with me to-day;" and he turned on his heel and walked away. Emerson was the color of a dozen rainbows, but he had to stand it.

Notice.

Just received per steamer Columbia, a fine lot of eastern oysters, which will be served up in first class style at Rosses, Occident block.

IRRITATION OF THE SCALP.

An Authentic Testimony. Gentlemen—For five years I have been greatly troubled with dandruff, with a severe itching of the scalp, and my hair falling out. I have tried almost every known remedy, all proving worthless. Seeing BUNNETT'S COMBINE and BUNNETT'S KALLISTON advertised, I procured a bottle of each, and an happy state that the dandruff is completely removed, and no itching whatever remains. J. E. CAVEY, Kansas City, Mo. BUNNETT'S FLAVORING EXTRACTS are the best.

Peruvian Bitters.

Cinchona Balsa. The Count Clinchou was the Spanish Viceroy in Peru in 1820. The Countess, his wife, contracted an intermittent fever, from which she was freed by the use of the native remedy, the Peruvian bark, or, as it was called in the language of the country, "Quinquina." Gradual for her recovery, on her return to Europe in 1822, she introduced the remedy in Spain, where it was known under various names, until Linnaeus called it in honor of the lady who had brought them that which was more precious than the gold of the Indies. To this day, after a lapse of two hundred and fifty years, science has given nothing to take its place. It effectually cures a morbid appetite for stimulants, by restoring the natural tone of the stomach. It drives the excessive flow of liquor as it does of bile, and destroys both alike. The powerful tonic virtue of the Cinchona is preserved in the Peruvian Bitters, which are an effective agent against malarial fever to-day as they were in the days of the old Spanish Viceroys. We guarantee the ingredients of these bitters to be absolutely pure, and of the best known quality. A trial will satisfy you that this is the best bitter for the recovery of the system, and we willingly abide this test. For sale by all druggists, grocers and liquor dealers. Order it.

The Peruvian syrup has cured thousands who were suffering from dyspepsia, debility, liver complaint, boils, tumors, female complaints, etc. Pamphlets free to any address. Seth W. Fowler & Sons, Boston.

All citizens of Oregon who desire to inform their friends in this state of the conditions and progress of this state, can have no more complete and comprehensive volume of facts to send them than by subscribing for this journal, and having us mail it weekly to their friends. We mail it as directed. For $5.00 in advance, we mail three copies of THE WEEKLY ASTORIAN one year.

A cough, cold or sore throat should be stopped. Neglect frequently results in an incurable lung disease or consumption. Brown's Bronchial Trochies do not disperse the stomach like cough syrups and balsams, but act directly on the inflamed parts, allaying irritation, give relief in asthma, bronchitis, coughs, catarrh, and the throat troubles which singers and public speakers are subject to. For thirty years Brown's bronchial trochies have been recommended by physicians, and always give perfect satisfaction. Having been tested by wide and constant use for nearly an entire generation, they have attained well-merited rank among the few staple remedies of the age. Sold at 25 cents a box everywhere.

HOSTETTER'S
CELEBRATED
BITTERS

Diminished Vigor
is retaken in great measure, to those troubled with weak kidneys, by a judicious use of Hostetter's Bitters, which invigorates and stimulates without exciting the urinary organs. In conjunction with its influence upon them, it corrects acidity, improves appetite, and in every way conduces to health and nerve power. Another marked quality is its control over fever and age, and its power of preventing it. For sale by all druggists and dealers generally.

By Universal Accord.

AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS are the best of all purgatives for family use. They are the product of long, laborious, and successful chemical investigation, and their extensive use by physicians in their practice, and by all civilized nations, proves them the best and most effective purgative pill that medical science can devise. Its intrinsic value and curative powers no other pills can be compared with them, and every person, knowing their virtues, will employ them, when needed. They keep the system in perfect order, and maintain in healthy action the whole machinery of life. Mild, searching and effectual, they are especially adapted to the needs of the digestive apparatus, derangements of which they prevent and cure.
