Government of Alaska.

A BILL introduced by Sherman in the senate says a Washington dispatch providing for a government for Alaska sets up a judicial district in the territory and establishes there a district court, with the jurisdiction, civil and criminal, which is given by law to district courts of the United States and such other jurisdiction as may be conferred by the laws of Washington territory. A judge is to be appointed by the president with a salary of three thousand dollars. The bill also provides for the appointment of an attorney and marshal for the district, whose fees and salaries shall be the same as those officers in Washington territory. A clerk is also to be appointed, and two terms in each year are provided for, one at Sitka and the other at Wrangel, with special sessions when necessary. The general laws of Washington territory are extended over Alaska. Three justices of the peace are to be appointed, to hold court at Sitka, one at Wrangel and the other on the deck of the revenue marine steamer in port along the coast. Appeals from justice court must be taken to the district court and fines received by justices are to be paid to the collector of customs. There are also to be three constables, one of whom is to be jailer. Justices are to have jurisdiction in all testamentary and probate matters and their courts are to be courts of record. They are also to be ex-officio U. S. court commissioners and have power to grant writs of habeas corpus. The bill requires the attorney general to compile and print in pamphlet form in the English and Russian languages the general criminal laws of Washington Territory and law and practice there relating to testimony and probate proceedings, and to place in the hands of the officers above named, these laws which are to be distributed in Alaska.

"Devilish Depravity."

In the Guiteau trial last Friday District Attorney Corkhill hit the mark when he said, "We present this testimony because we want to show that what defense calls insanity is nothing more than devilish depravity." In conversation on the assumption of insanity, an actor of life long experience is reported as saying: "Guiteau is not insane, but is a very good actor. To be sure, he had the advantage of realistic surroundings and is acting for his life, but still he deserves credit for his cleverness. He has not, perhaps, brains enough to be insane, but certainly sufficient to be very dangerously eccentric. One strong evidence against the idea of insanity is the fact that he grows weary at times and rests himself just as a man acting on the stage. Now fatigue is something utterly unknown to a man insane. The brain of an insane man is never wearied. This fellow Guiteau nurses himself up to the acting point, either by pretending to write, or hiding himself behind newspapers which he pretends to read. It is much easier to act where everything is real than where everything is advertised and is artificial as on the stage and in a play. There is no instance where one in the most perfect sobriety could stagger into a bar room and act the drunken man so offensively and effectually, that he would be hustled out by the proprietor. He might do the same act with double realistic force on the stage and not impress the audience at all. Thus it is with Guiteau."

Jno. W. FORNEY died at his residence in Philadelphia last Friday morning.

THE clever correspondents and sensationalists who are forever springing upon the country some wonderful discovery of some abnormal transaction, have now something less wonderful than usual, and yet sufficiently sensational to excite the comment they crave. The latest hobgoblin is an alleged scheme to obtain possession of the northern Mexican states during Grant's second term; the particulars of which—according to the repertorial detectives—have just come to light. The plot was to create fraudulent claims against our sister republic founded on cattle stealing and unwarranted incursions by Mexicans upon American soil. Upon this claims were to be formulated, which, being approved by Congress, demand was to be made upon the Mexican government, and that government refusing, war was to be declared, with Mexico as the aggressive party. The object was seizure and confiscation of the border territory, for the purpose of parceling out said territory among those of Grant's adherents who, by reason of such largess, would lead their aid to his third-term scheme. And the best of it all is that a good many Eastern papers believe it, and write long-winded editorials about the danger that existed and how happily all this terrible disaster was averted.

A NOVEL enterprise is reported from Ontario, where the editor of the Woodstock Sentinel issues a circular stating his project for the emigration of the surplus female population from Ontario to Manitoba. It is stated that he has already obtained the address of thousands of young women in the province, and is collecting others. To all those the circular above referred to is sent, as well as a blank which candidates are expected to fill up. The information sought for in the blank is more or less of a formal character, calling for information regarding age, color of hair, eyes, religion, kind of temper, county wherein residing, kind of husband desired, widower or young man. These bills when filled up, will be forwarded to the editor, who will go through them all and classify. They are expected to be in before the New Year, and the work of classification will then be begun and finished before March 1, when the list will be printed in classified form and great numbers of them sent up to the Northwest for distribution among the wifeless men. On the 1st of April the premier train-load of the ladies will start for Winnipeg under the personal charge of the editor, assisted by a corps of matron ladies from all parts of Ontario.

PRESIDENT ARTHUR is disappointing all hands. The men who indorsed petitions for office by writing "One of the gallant 306," are disappointed to find that they can't use him; the men who feared that he would carry his last summer's quarrel into the White House, are now agreeably disappointed to find that the lesson of July 2d is not lost, and that "His Accidency" seems to be determined to be President of the Nation rather than leader of a faction of the Republican party. Claim is made that the election of Keifer as speaker was due to an Arthur-Cameron-Conkling-Grant combination, but that is simply charging him with that which his aspersers were desirous of having him do that they might weaken the Administration.

By the burning of the Ring theatre at the Austrian capital last Thursday night four hundred persons lost their lives.
