ZACH CHANDLER ON HAYES

A correspondent of the Boston Herald in a recent resume of an interview with Zachary Chandler, tells how the great Michigan stalwart felt toward the man whom he placed in the Presidential chair. In response to a statement of Hayes that it was "sentiment" that elected him President, Zach. said: "Hayes is just fool enough to think that it was a sentiment which elected him President. Sentiment came near defeating him for the Presidency. His nomination fell like a wet blanket upon the party. It took hard work and money to elect him. It cost much money and great effort to save him after the vote was cast. Had I not declared promptly that he was elected, and stuck to it, even against strong opposition in our own party, he never would have gotten his seat. A day's hesitation would have destroyed the fruits of our victory. Tilden's managers had dispatched a man to Florida to manipulate the result. It was necessary to have a man on the ground to see that he had fair play. We had to combat men with unlimited cash in hand and willing to commit fraud to seat their man. "I sent a messenger there upon the instant, and he reached Florida in time to meet Tilden's man and thwart his wicked intention. I also sent others wherever it was necessary, without a question as to the cost, and gave my individual check to defray the expenses. It was not for Mr. Hayes, but for the Republican party, that I did these things, although I then supposed him to be an honorable man and a true Republican. When the result had been determined, and I footed up the cost, I found that I had drawn $37,500 from my private purse for the expenses thus incurred. Six of us divided this $37,500 raised in New England for these expenses. Hayes never treated with common courtesy any of the six men who paid the bulk of this sum. Don Cameron, Levi P. Morton and myself are three of the six. During the State campaign in Ohio which preceded the national election, we were not only obliged to furnish the bulk of the funds for the campaign, but I had to send Wm. E. Chandler out there to wake them up and help make their organization. We gave thousands after thousands of dollars to aid their local fight, and much of it was given at Mr. Hayes' personal request. The drafts in some instances were made payable to his order. I think $40,000 was so drawn. It took harder work and more money to elect Hayes President than any man that ever occupied the executive chair. He knew, too, that a large portion of the money he received for the Ohio campaign was raised by direct assessments upon Federal officeholders, for the fact was communicated to him. So all this semblance of virtue now shows him to be a contemptible hypocrite. After he was elected President there was an occurrence which demonstrates the absolute dishonesty of the man's present attitude more than all the other things in this ridiculous farce of civil service hypocrisy. Mr. Appleman, who is Vice President of the Citizens' National Bank at Washington, and Treasurer of the National Committee, found himself nearly $4,000 short of money to defray the running expenses of the committee. This, after we had settled up the $37,500 it took to make Hayes President, after the vote was cast. Appleman called my attention to it. I said, suppose you see the President about it. He went to the Executive Mansion, saw Mr. Hayes and made a statement of the facts to him. Mr. Hayes replied, so Appleman told me, that he would see Mr. McCormick, who was then Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, and have the delinquent clerks pay up their campaign assessments. McCormick was sent for, the notices were printed and ready to be distributed, but some of the President's advisers learning of the fact, and recognizing that it would not look well alongside of civil service order No. 1, secured its withdrawal, and when Appleman again approached him upon the subject, he said he was powerless to do more. He never offered to contribute anything toward it from his private purse, although I had been informed that he had failed to pay anything from his own means to the campaign fund in Ohio the year he was elected to the Presidency. Being in Washington some time after this occurrence, Appleman told me the facts, and I gave him my private check to close the account. I did not intend to have it said that the Republican party would not pay its debts. The facts were laid bare, not from any personal disappointments or animosities, but simply to show the inconsistent dishonesty of a President who drew his salary every month in advance, to secure the interest upon it, or for fear some question as to his title might keep a few dollars out of his purse. He was also so meanly parsimonious that he bought his table supplies from the Post Commissary so as to get them at cost price. Army officers have this privilege, and he secured it under a rather strained construction of the law, as Commander-in-Chief of the Army.

Condensed Wisdom.

Belief is not in our power, but truthfulness is.

Some men's attack is safer than their protection.

A man often stubs his toe on the threshold of success.

True wisdom, in general, consists in energetic determination.

The grumblers never work, and the workers never grumble.

Mystery always magnifies danger as the fog magnifies the sun.

Consolations console only those who are willing to be consoled.

We are never ruined by what we want, but by what we think we want.

If you are asked to do something your shortest answer is to go and do it.

Economy is no disgrace; it is better living on a little than outliving a great deal.

If you would not have affliction visit you twice, listen at once to what it teaches.

Those who think that money will do anything, may be suspected of doing anything for money.

There are men to whom we cannot possibly give enough to prevent them from demanding more.

Iron is the most strongly united in the fiercest flame, and the same is true of valuable friendships.

It is with you as with plants; from the first fruit they bear we learn what may be expected in the future.

It is a great deal easier to build castles in the air when you are young than it is to live in them when you are old.

The proper way to check slander is to despise it; attempt to overtake and refute it, and it will overrun you.

Never give a present with a string attached to it as if you wanted to keep it, or expected it to come back again.

Nothing makes the earth seem so spacious as to have friends at a distance; they make the latitudes and longitudes.

It is an admitted fact that men who use their brains live longer, other things being equal, than the men who do not.

The only man who is absolutely sure that he is always in the right is the one who is known to be ignorant and narrow.

Riches are often thorns that pierce the head with cares in the getting them, and heart with griefs in the parting with them.

Give even an angel a bad name, and the simplest of us can see the evil expression in his face, whether it is there or not.

The men who have "a great mind" to be honest generally succeed. It is the man of small mind who yields to temptation.

The time spent in reading books that do not make us think is worse than useless. One good book, however, is food for a life-time.

Pleasure may aptly be compared to many very great books, which increase in real value in just the proportion that they are abridged.

Investigation frequently leads to doubt where there was none before. So much the better. If the thing was not true, inquiry can do no possible harm.

If in your domestic life you would be supremely happy you must not forget the old adage, "The husband must not see and the wife must be blind."

The best people need afflictions for trial of their virtue. How can we exercise the grace of contentment if all things succeed well; of that of forgiveness, if we have no enemies?

Never forget that it is your duty to laugh whenever you find anything to laugh at. "A good laugh," says Charles Lamb, "is worth a hundred groans in any state of the market."

Things Which Annoy One.

To get fairly out of the house and find you have forgotten the very thing you meant to take with you.

To sit next the talking young couple at the theater.

To see yourself in a lucid moment as others see you.

To buy something handy to have in the house and be told by your wife on taking it home that you've paid twice too much for a poor article.

To put something away for safe keeping so carefully that you can't find it again.

To sit down hungry at the restaurant and wait fifteen minutes before you can catch a waiter.

To fix your mouth for a favorite dish and after waiting ten minutes more to be told "it's all out."

To have the septuagenarian, who all your life has been as an old man to you, speak out to you, "Well, you're getting old like the rest of us."

To be always putting your knife or pencil in the wrong pocket and going through all the rest before you find them.

To attempt in one day more business of various sorts than your mind can grasp or your hands can handle.

To be told you are growing old when you know you're growing young.

To be told by advisory friends that you ought not to do so and so when you haven't done anything of the sort, and then to be told you ought to do thus and so when you have all along been doing it.

—Mr. John Rogers of the Central Market, has made arrangements to keep at the Sweet Fresh Fish, etc., in their common

Quite a number have already located homes in this city, and yet there is room. Sold on time to suit purchasers. Located one mile south of Astoria, on the sunny side of the hill, on Young's bay.

J. WILLIAMSON, SR.

BURNETT'S COCAINE.
Unlike all other Hair Dressings. Is the best for promoting the growth of and beautifying the hair, and rendering it dark and glossy. The Cocaine holds, in a liquid form, a large proportion of deodorized coconut oil, prepared expressly for this purpose. No other compound possesses the peculiar properties which so exactly suit the various conditions of the human hair.

The superiority of BURNETT'S FLAVOR EXTRA consists in their perfect purity and great strength.

Peruvian Bitters.
Cinchoona Barks.

The Count Clinch was the Spanish Viceroy in Peru in 1630. The Countess, his wife, was prostrated by an intermittent fever, from which she was freed by the use of the native remedy, the Peruvian bark, or, as it was called in the language of the country, "Quinquina." Grateful for her recovery, on her return to Europe in 1632, she introduced the remedy in Spain, where it was known under various names, until Linnaeus called it Cinchona, in honor of the lady who had brought them that which was more precious than the gold of the Incas.

To this day, after a lapse of two hundred and fifty years, science has given us nothing to take its place. It effectually cures a morbid appetite for stimulants, by restoring the natural tone of the stomach. It attacks the excess of liquor as it does a fever, and destroys both alike. The powerful tonic virtue of the Cinchona is preserved in the Peruvian Bitters, which are as effective against the fever as the bark itself were in the days of the old Spanish Viceroy. We guarantee the ingredients of these bitters to be absolutely pure, and of the best known quality. A trial will satisfy you that this is the best bitter in the world. "The proof of the pudding is in the eating," and we willingly abide this test. For sale by all druggists, grocers and liquor dealers. Order it.

King of the Blood
Is not a "cure all," it is a blood-purifier and tonic. Impurity of the blood poisons the system, deranges the circulation, and thus insures many disorders, known by different names to distinguish them according to effects, but being really branches or phases of the same disease. "Treatise on Diseases of Blood," such as Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Liver Complaint, Constipation, Nervous Disorders, Headache, Bursitis, General Weakness, Heart Disease, Dropsy, Kidney Disease, Piles, Rheumatism, Catarrh, Scrofula, Skin Disorders, Pinworms, Glands, Neuritis, etc., are cured by attacking the cause, impurity of the blood. Chemists and physicians agree in calling it "the most genuine and efficient preparation for the purpose." Sold by Druggists, in pamphlet, "Treatise on Diseases of Blood," wrapped around each bottle. D. HANSON, BOND & CO., Proprietors, Astoria, N. Y.

Various Causes.
Advancing years, care, sickness, disappointment, and hereditary predisposition—all operate to turn the hair gray, and either of them inclines it to shed prematurely. AYRES' HAIR VIGOR will restore faded or gray, light or red hair to a rich brown or deep black, as may be desired. It softens and cleanses the scalp, giving it a healthy action. It removes and cures dandruff and humors. By its use falling hair is checked, and a new growth will be produced in all cases where the follicles are not destroyed or the glands decayed. Its effects are beautifully shown on brassy, weak, or sickly hair, on which few applications will produce the gloss and freshness of youth. Harmless and sure in its operation, it is incomparable as a dressing, and is especially valued for the soft lustre and richness of tone it imparts. It contains neither oil nor dye, and will not soil or color white cambric; yet it lasts long on the hair, and keeps it fresh and vigorous.
