Correct.

The whole power of the State should be directed to getting appropriations for two great purposes; first, improvements of the bar at the mouth of the river; and secondly, canals around The Dalles and the Cascades. This done, there is plenty of water to float all the boats, barges and water craft, to do cheaply and speedily all the commerce of this country for all time. And if the big ships can't get up to Portland let them stop at Astoria, and let Portland hold its business and draw new business by virtue of the inducements it offers to trade.—Vidette.

—Last Friday evening, says the Dayton Chronicle, a brakeman on the Northern Pacific, named Harry Burmister, was instantly killed at Westwood. While on a flat, which was being switched, he fell off in front of the car and three wheels passed over his body, terribly mangling it.

—W. R. Dean died at his home, near Skipanon, on the 19th, having been failing in health for some time past. He was about fifty years of age. He was a pioneer on this coast, having settled at Nehalem about 1865, where he lived till a year since. He was known as an upright, energetic, intelligent man. In 1876 he was a Joint Representative from Clatsop and Tillamook counties. The funeral will be held on Clatsop at 1 P. M. to-day.

—The Standard thinks that the whole secret of this State making business at the present session of Congress is based on the purpose to create strength for the Republicans in Congress and for the next Presidential election. It is a sort of settled thing that all the new States generally give a Republican majority; and filled with foreigners, too; while in the Southern States, where there is the smallest percentage of foreign born to native citizens, Bourbonism is in the ascendancy.

—Some of the finest timber in Washington Territory can be found near the headwaters of Nootsack river; and some of the finest openings for manufacturing every description of wood work can be found there. About three miles back from Bellingham bay is a lake about twelve miles long, averaging two miles wide, partly surrounded by the mountains. This lake is 300 feet above the level of the bay. It has only one outlet, which empties into the bay at the town of Whatcom. This outlet, which is called Whatcom creek, falls 200 feet within a mile of the lake, forming about a dozen mill sites. It then meanders through almost dead level ground for about two miles, when it has another fall about a quarter of a mile from the bay, and another of forty feet close to the bay.

Oregon Improvements.

During the first week of February, we learn from the Congressional Record, that Senator Grover introduced the following four bills:

S. B. No. 1,027, making an appropriation for the improvement of the mouth of the Columbia river, in the State of Oregon and the Territory of Washington. Be it enacted that the sum of $500,000 be, and the same is hereby appropriated out of the moneys in the treasury not otherwise apprised, to be expended under the dition of the Secretary of War, for the improvement of the mouth of the Columbia river, in the State of Oregon and Territory of Washington.

S. B. 1,028, making an appropriation for continuing the construction of the canal and locks at the Cascades of the Columbia river, in the State of Oregon.

Be it enacted, etc., that the sum of $750,000 be, and the same is hereby appropriated, to be paid out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of War, for continuing the construction of the canal and locks at the Cascades of the Columbia river, in the State of Oregon.

S. B. 1,029, making an appropriation for continuing the improvement of the mouth of Yaquina bay, in the State of Oregon.

Be it enacted, etc., that the sum of $200,000 be, and the same is hereby appropriated, out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of War, for continuing the improvement of mouth of Yaquina bay, in the State of Oregon.

S. B. 1,067, making an appropriation for the construction of breakwater and harbor of refuge at Port Orford, in the State of Oregon.

Be it enacted, etc., that the sum of $250,000 be, and the same is hereby appropriated, to be paid out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of War, for the construction of a breakwater and harbor of refuge at Port Orford, in the State of Oregon.

Senator Grover, when introducing the above bills, had them read the first time and laid them on the table, for the reason that he desired to submit some remarks on them before referring them to the committee on commerce.

The Snow.

The skies that flushed in sunset splendor and deepened into the steely glitter of a winter night were overspread on Sunday morning with a fleecy vail of gray clouds that, floating in from the north, by nightfall had begun to sprinkle snow. All night long it fell, and on waking yesterday morning, all out door objects had assumed the strange and fantastic shapes that snow wreaths give. The old half-forgotten sleds and sledges, cutters, bumpers, and everything else that goes on runners were brought out, and by ten o'clock everyone that had a chance was out with jingling sleigh bells. If it would but stay cold enough to freeze hard and dry, the streets of Astoria are the finest in the United States for good sleighing, but, no sooner does the snow come silently down, than the warm breath of the Pacific melts it.
