THE CITY.

THE DAILY ASTORIAN will be sent by mail at 15 cents a month, free of postage.

The Canby resumed her regular trips yesterday.

Puget Sound exported 150,000,000 feet of lumber in '81.

One of the city prisoners is employed sweeping the streets.

The school at Columbia City closed on the 1st—Mr. Brower teacher.

The Coos Bay News thinks that the cannery upon the Siuslaw will be started up this season.

The lightning speed with which the mail is distributed is a source of pleasure to all concerned.

Portland spent $81,371 46 for her schools during the fiscal year ending March 1st; a good showing.

'Tis said that President Arthur acknowledges no superior when it comes to playing the banjo.

It is stated that the Columbia steamer Mountain Queen, will be taken to the Sound this season.

The Sam, yesterday brought a raft of 100,000 feet of fir from Titus Adams, on John Day, to G. W. Hume.

There is considerable activity among the loggers, and every camp is making preparations for the coming season.

Conkling declines the seat on the supreme bench. He has a better idea of propriety than the man who offered him the position.

The Columbia dropped down to the bar at 1:30 yesterday. At 1:45 the Oregon, with an extra heavily-laden signal gun, awoke the echoes as she steamed in to the dock.

Mr. Carl Adler and bride arrived at home on yesterday's steamer. Congratulations will be in order for the remainder of the week.

British Columbia, with 25,000 people, will need $380,000 for running expenses this year.

The Liquor Dealers' Protective Union of Oregon have filed articles of incorporation with the Secretary of State, under the act providing for the incorporation of churches, religious, benevolent and charitable societies.

A novel scheme for catching fish is put in daily practice at Burlington, Iowa, by Follett, a diver, who, clad in his suit, descends into the river at the end of the draw of the railroad bridge, and with a large hook snags large catfish that congregate in that place, where the eddying water destroys the force of the current.

'Tis thought that the Northern Pacific railroad, in all probability, will experience some trouble in the Crow Indian country, Montana, the coming summer.

Lively times are reported at the sealing grounds, off Cape Flattery. The squaws strip the pelts off the seals after the males have captured and brought them to the schooner.

The finest kind of stationery at Adlers.

Just arrived per steamer Oregon, the finest assortment of French note paper, and envelopes to match, at Carl Adler's.

Announcement.

The National Surgical Institute of Indianapolis, with branches at Philadelphia, Atlanta, Ga., and San Francisco, which has a national reputation, will permanently establish a branch at Portland, Oregon.

Beware of all traveling Doctors who may claim to represent any other institute, for this is the only Surgical Institute on this coast with facilities and experience for the treatment of deformities.

Poetical.

In speaking of the Columbia river, a writer in the February number of the West Shore, says:

At its mouth Cape Hancock stands, a mighty sentinel of everlasting rock, bathed on one side by the virgin Columbia, and lashed by loud surges of the Pacific on the other.

The difference in the price of salmon during the last twelve or fourteen years illustrates how necessary it is to have such an admirable system as the present to insure any profit.

The first attempts at canning, were, necessarily, experimental; now the matter is so thoroughly understood that not one-tenth of the loss ensues that prevailed up to within a few years ago.

For the last few seasons the greater part of the canneries receive their fish directly from the fishermen's boats; the fish are cleaned, washed, dried, and laid on tables under huge knives and sliced up; then comes the putting into cans, each can holding a pound of the back and belly; "all back would be too dry; all belly too rich," says our informant, so a happy medium is struck and all unwholesome sequels avoided in this way.

Then comes the soldering of the cans, and the cooking. Here is the critical part of the work; the parties in charge like everyone else in charge of anything must understand what they are doing, or failure is the result.

After the cans are cooked for an hour or so holes are made to allow all air to escape, then sealed up and again boiled for another hour, after which the supposition is that there are no "swell heads" likely to come out of the batch.

Time was when as high as eight per cent. of bad cans were found; now, if one half of one per cent. must be thrown away, it is considered as misfortune, tending as it does to diminish materially the profit upon the investment.

To buy fish and lose them, would, in itself be bad enough, but a pound tin of canned salmon represents loss of fish, tin, labor, insurance, freight, fuel, supplies, and, worst of all, if not taken out, loss of reputation for the cannery.

This testing is done by men who have reason to claim expertise, and is the most critical part of the performance. After the testing comes the labeling. These labels are ornamental affairs, gotten up in all the gorgeous glory of crimson and blue, and gold and scarlet, and are the exclusive property of the cannery in question, though, sometimes it happens that outside parties in California and elsewhere mark their canned salmon "Columbia river salmon," and foist an inferior article on the market in that way.

No other salmon has the genuine flavor that makes the Columbia catch so universally sought after.

From the time the unsuspecting salmon finds himself in a gill net, till he is sliced, canned, cooked and boxed, he passes through fifty hands and in as expeditious a manner as in the famous hog killing and pork packing establishments of Cincinnati and Chicago.

Very little salmon is salted, the little that is packed in that way being chiefly meant for local demand.

In former years attempts have been made at various times to pack meats, fruits, vegetables, etc., but owing to causes that could not be foreseen, such attempts were not successful.

This year three of the canneries at this place intend to pack beef and make an attempt to put the packing of fruits on a permanent basis. The packing of meats, could, we think, be made pay from the start; from the scarcity of fruits in this vicinity it would seem as though the effort to establish any canning would be exceedingly difficult.

Just step around and see Adler's new stock of novelties.
