Salmon is running in the river: some fine ones have been caught, and connoisseurs pronounce them to be the finest in flavor they have ever eaten.

We notice the Portland folks are growling about their mail. Well, that's the privilege of all American citizens, and every one feels better after it.

The lightning express steamer lines from the interior to this city make splendid time. One hundred and ten miles in six and one-half hours is about as good as can be accomplished in any waters.

A Post Mortem Explanation.

In an article on the tribulation of Democratic leaders, a correspondent of the San Jose Mercury says, speaking of the national convention of 1880: "The Oregon convention instructed for Tilden, but by the use of money, the misuse of whiskey, and the adroitness and craft of Ellinger, Neltner and a few other 'machine' managers in that body, the delegation was so secured that, like the California recreant six, they turned their backs upon pledges and instructions, and gave their vote for Field."

Democratic County Convention.

At the Democratic County Convention of Clatsop county, held in this city yesterday, a committee on credentials was appointed, and six delegates were chosen to the state convention which meets at Portland tomorrow, the following gentlemen being elected: R. H. Morrison, Isaac Bergman, Thos. Dealy, C. H. Stockton, and W. G. Ross, A. Van Dusen. The matter of nominations was indefinitely postponed.

New Schooner.

Capt. Mitchell, who came up from San Francisco on the Columbia, goes to Shoalwater bay this morning to superintend the construction of a new schooner, the keel of which is just laid. It will be built of Oregon fir, will be 140 feet long, 11 feet depth of hold and 33 feet beam, and will, when completed, be a staunch vessel of 350 tons, carrying lumber from Shoalwater bay to San Francisco and southern ports.
