—Popular greeting: "Isn't this beautiful weather?"

—The state and county Republican ticket appears this morning.

—Chinese parents are naming recent offspring Ah Thur. Such is fame.

—Elberson's new bakery delivers bread to customers, a good example of enterprise.

—We are indebted to Hon. M. C. George for a large quantity of public documents.

—Lodi, Cal., people have planted 2,000 acres of watermelons, in the interests of childhood.

—A complete stock of boys and children's suits, just received, at McIntosh's clothing store.

—Seattle says there are no loafers in that burg. There are a few here, though there is work for all who want to work.

—If it is clear to-night, and you want to sit up till 12 o'clock you can see the new comet (B. 1882): it is in the constellation of Lyra.

—The Yaquina sailed at five last evening for Tillamook, Yaquina bay and Coos bay. She will bring back a load of coal from the latter point.

The stammer of his grammar checked the glamour of his amour, otherwise there would have been a different story to tell in the second ward.

—Capt. Hustler gives notice this morning that the Board of School Directors are ready to receive bids for grading the lot for the new school house.

—The Fleetwood will lay off to-day to have her propeller changed. She will leave to-morrow morning and return on Sunday, leaving Portland at nine o'clock A. M.

—The Alaska, of the Guion line, recently made the fastest time on record from New York to Queenstown, being seven days six hours and forty-three minutes in transit across the Atlantic.

—The outbreak of the New Mexico Apaches is reported to be assuming alarming proportions. Thus far over one hundred whites have been massacred. American and Mexican soldiers are after the red devils.

—An anti-Chinese organization in San Francisco has for its object an inquiry into the best way to prevent the Chinese from coming here. The way to prevent their coming is very simple. Dont hire them. If they couldn't get employment they wouldn't come.

—The Oregonian compresses the whole subject of river improvement into one sensible sentence. It says: "The entrance to the river ought first to be improved; then points above." That is true; we will also compress ten columns into ten words and add: To accomplish this object is worth all it will cost.

—Next Monday the city council goes to Clatsop to pick out a location for a new cemetery. 'Tis a good idea. We understand that it is also the intention of the city fathers to make some arrangements for the building of a pest house. This is a good idea too. Now when the road is built to Skipanon it will be a marked improvement.

—In the North American Review for May, Carl Schurz, treating of "Party Schisms and Future Problems," presents many well considered observations which cannot fail to interest in the highest degree that large and growing class of citizens who refuse to be influenced by obsolete party cries.

The Famous "Blind Pool."

The New York Times gives the following history of the "blind pool" which was so much talked of some time since:

The Villard syndicate or "blind pool" received its seventh and closing installment of subscriptions yesterday. This syndicate was long one of the perplexities of Wall street. No combination was ever made which was better able to guard its plans and purposes. Its secrets were known to none except Henry Villard. The pool was indeed a "blind" one so far as the market was concerned, though astute operators were convinced occasionally that certain movements were traceable to Mr. Villard, and in the interest, presumably, of his syndicate. But from such uncertain conclusions only was there anything to be known. With the closing of the subscriptions yesterday, however, it becomes possible to make public the inside history of the pool. Early in the winter of 1880-81 Mr. Villard, as President and founder of the Oregon Railway and Navigation Company, conceived that the interests of that company and of the Northern Pacific would be promoted by establishi g an identity of the controlling ownership of both, and that this might be accomplished by forming a new company to acquire control by purchase of the stock of each if the necessary means could be obtained. His plan also contemplated the construction of a system of branch lines subsidiary to the main lines to develop the business of the adjacent country. Such a project, of course, required secrecy, for if it were known that anybody contemplated buying up so large an amount of any particular stock in open market the price would have gone up beyond reach. He therefore went to work quietly with his own means and credit in the months of December, 1880, and January 1881, and took large lines of the desired stocks out of the market. Having reached a point where success seemed reasonably certain, he called upon his friends, by a private circular to furnish him $8,000,000, but did not disclose the use he intended to make of this sum. The circular was sent to some fifty persons. About one-third in number of these persons subscribed for the full amount before the circular reached the others. There was a rush of subscribers and some had to be cut down to give the others a chance, and the subscription rose to 5 per cent. premium before the subscribers knew what use was made of their money. The subscriptions were paid in three installments, running from February 15 to April 2, 1881, a portion of them falling due in a very tight money market, the subscribers, meanwhile, getting nothing but Mr. Villard's personal receipt for the money.

On the 24th of June the subscribers met, by Villard's invitation, at his office and received information as to the use he had made of the money, and passed resolutions approving it in all respects. Mr. Villard then gave them the option of joining him in a new subscription for the further sum of $12,000,000, to pay for additional amounts of Northern Pacific and Oregon Railway and Navigation stock purchased or contracted for by him, and this second subscription was likewise filled up within a few days, the payments extending from July 1, 1881, to April 1, 1882. The payments were all made with remarkable regularity, notwithstanding the depression which came over the stock market during the second half of last year. The new company was organized immediately after the meeting of June 24th, under the name of the Oregon and Transcontinental Company. The opposition at first shown by some of the Northern Pacific stockholders to the proposed union of interests has disappeared, and these, as well as such stockholders who were neutral or indifferent in the beginning, are now working in entire harmony with Mr. Villard. The construction of the proposed branch lines to the Northern Pacific and the Oregon Railway and Navigation Company has been vigorously prosecuted, about 200 miles having been already completed and a large amount of work laid out for the present and succeeding years.

Mr. J. F. Warren, of Knappa, was in town yesterday. He has a large force ready to go to work getting out logs as soon as the weather and roads permit. A new shute will give him increased facilities this season. He says the logs go down this shute into the Columbia in one minute. As the shute is just one mile long, this may be considered rapid traveling.

Trial of the "Storm King's" Mate.

[SPECIAL DISPATCH TO THE ASTORIAN.]

PORTLAND, April 27.—The trial of Cyrus P. Crocker, first mate of the Storm King, took place here to-day in the United States Circuit Court before Judge Deady. It was a jury trial. The defendant was represented by Col. W. H. Effinger and Bourne. District Attorney Watson appeared for the government. The testimony was to the effect that simultaneous with Crocker's order to the occupants of Hume's boat to keep away from Fredericksen he ordered the ship's boat lowered which was done. The testimony further went on to show that Fredricksen, who must have heard Crocker's order, swam against the tide toward the fishing boat instead of with the tide toward the ship's boat. The jury was out half an hour and returned a verdict of "Not Guilty."

The Times says; "They sleep on the snow with their blankets, or on poles laid on the top of the snow, which is three feet deep, but melting fast. There being no show to work, they pass the time playing cards, smoking their pipes, and spinning yarns."

—From "reliable" sources several of our up-country exchanges learn that a good many Democrats are going to vote for George for Congress. Other reports equally reliable are that a good many Republicans will vote for Fenton. The probability is tha. the names of the rival candidates for congressional honors will not be scratched in one hundred instances in the entire state.
