A little shower would do our streets good.

The Governor Grover is loading with railroad iron from Flavel's dock.

The Tam O'Shanter and North Bend are loading with lumber at Knappion.

There will be a Democratic meeting to-night. Messrs. Strode, Cleveland and Burney will address the assemblage.

The virtues of a true friend reconcile us to his faults. The force of these remarks lies in their personal application.

Hausen Bros., are moving the building formerly next to Bergman & Berry's, to Chenamus street, opposite the post office.

That was a most suggestive action, sending that "fresh" young man a little sack of salt. He has ceased parting his hair in the middle.

The Fleetwood carries an arrangement on the bow that pushes down and aside the nets she happens to meet and thus saves them from destruction.

The new steamer of the Ilwaco Steam Navigation company, the General Miles, is making rapid progress, and will be ready to launch in a few weeks.

There will be an excursion tomorrow on the Canby to the forts and Ilwaco. The boat will leave at ten and will bring every one back in good season.

The name of the man who was brought into Coroner Franklin's last Thursday, having been one of the two men drowned in Lewis and Clarke's day before, was Julius Taobebit.

The increased facility in the matter of travel is particularly noticeable. From Cape Hancock to Portland the matter of daily transit to and from all points and centering at this place is of mutual advantage to all.

In observance of decoration day Gen. Miles has issued an order suspending all but necessary military duty on that day at all the posts in the department, and directing that minie guns be fired in the morning and a national salute at noon.

On Monday evening, Prof. Willio, the celebrated magician and sleight of hand performer will give one of his attractive performances at Liberty Hall. He is heartily endorsed by the press of different places where he has given entertainments and does all that he says he will do.

The pile-driver across the street is a center of attraction at present. All day long there is a crowd watching the huge timbers being driven into the ground, and every time the hammer falls there is a young earthquake in the adjacent real estate. We rather like the shaking up it gives us over here and shall miss it—oh, so much—when the 300 piles are driven and the merry cry of the mason is heard as he cries, "mort."

Our regular salmon item does not appear to-day. The fact is that the statements are so contradictory that we hate to risk our reputation for veracity by giving publicity to what is said. Yesterday we asked one of the leading cannery men on the river how many cases were packed so far, approximately. He figured a minute and said: "About 75,000." As he said that, another gentleman happened along, and having been asked the same question, said: "At least 150,000." Perhaps it is just as well to add the two and average it, which would make 112,500 cases—and which is probably near the exact amount.

The Signal Service.

The signal service is endeavoring to extend the sphere of its usefulness over the ocean as well as the land. A number of sets of pamphlets, blanks and instructions in regard to taking observations have been received, says the Standard, from the chief of the signal service by Mr. M. L. Hearne, in charge of the station here, to be presented to all sea captains who will accept them and agree to use them. The parcels contain a book of instructions from the life saving service for the use of mariners in case of shipwreck, containing a list of the life-saving stations on the coast of the United States, and a code of official danger and distress signals by which ships can communicate with them. There is also a set of blanks and a card with Greenwich mean time for any latitude or longitude worked out so that all observations can be made at the same hour Greenwich time daily and instructions in several different languages. A war department weather map showing the course of the gulf stream, and the great China and Japan currents which strike our coast at the mouth of the Columbia, one going north and the other south, and exercising a very beneficial effect on our climate, accompanies the other documents, also a prepared envelope addressed to the Chief Signal Officer of the Army, in which the blanks are to be returned when filled. Every captain to whom these documents have been offered, by Mr. Hearne, has accepted them, and will, without doubt, make the expected returns, as this arrangement is intended especially for seafaring men. The information sought to be acquired by this plan will be very valuable, and can be obtained in no other manner. For instance, in case of a typhoon, a number of ships may be within its radius and on the verge of it, and should all take observations by comparing them an accurate idea of the course, velocity and extent of the phenomenon would be furnished.

It Won't Do.

The East Oregonian has started to do a little bragging, but mixes in too much mendacity to sit well. We like to see a newspaper brag; we do a little of it ourselves, now and then, but always keep within the bounds of truth. Our Unatilla friend says that his journal contains "twenty-two columns of reading matter every week." That's good; but he goes on to say: "Weekly papers of Oregon never furnish more than sixteen, and some of them only ten columns." That's a-noush thing. THE WEEKLY ASTORIAN, bearing date of May 26, 1882, that lies on the counter, has thirty-eight columns of reading matter, and is only an average number of that useful and interesting publication. But he again opens his mouth and puts his foot in it: "Our subscription price," he says, "is only $3 a year, and the weekly papers charge the same." There, again, the facts are in opposition to his argument. That choice compendium of news, THE WEEKLY ASTORIAN, is sent one year for $2.

It isn't often we notice those things; but now and then, when a chap with more than the usual amount of gall makes such declarations, we want him to know that it will not do. We won't have it.

Horse Thief Lynched.

On Sunday night, says the Standard, a party of citizens in the vicinity of Rockport, thirty-five miles east of Clatsop, W. T., surrounded the house in which Aldey Neil, a well-known and desperate horse thief, was stopping, and after considerable parley he agreed to surrender if they would give him a trial. Messrs. Starr, Henderson and Gilbert were selected to take him to Cheney. They had proceeded with him some eight miles, when a band of masked men sprang from the woods, surrounded the hack, and after the exchange of a few shots between the guards and lynchers, Neil was given up. He was taken to a tree, and when daybreak came his lifeless body was there found. The lynchers then proceeded in search of another thief, William McCauley, who escaped from the Cheney jail in April, with what success is not learned. Neil was a desperate character. He was last fall captured with seventy-five head of stolen horses, but escaped from the guard. He shouted to his guard just before the lynching that he feared neither God, man or the devil.

CLIPPED AND CONDENSED.

Salem has had a proposition from parties to erect a woolen mill if sufficient inducement is offered. A bonus of $15,000 is wanted by the capitalists.

Albany firemen threaten to disband unless the corporation gives them a new steam fire engine.

The new insane asylum at Salem is said by those who know, to be much better planned and more desirable in a sanitary point of view than either asylum in California. It is certainly the cheapest building of any of its size on this coast. This has been accomplished by using prison labor when it could be made available. It is said by actual measurement the building is one-half a mile around. This extent of surface gives plenty of light and air to every room or ward in the building, which is to be completed in September. In December the state contract with the present keepers in Portland will be void, and if nothing occurs to prevent, the insane will be removed at that time to the new quarters.

Rails are being laid on the Northern Pacific Railroad at the rate of a mile to a mile and a quarter a day, and the road is completed to the mouth of Froze-to-Death creek, about eighty-five miles west of Miles City.

Dropped Dead.

Martin Johansen, was out with his partner J. P. Johnson, in their fishing boat yesterday morning about one o'clock, when he suddenly fell back in his boat and drawing a few long breaths expired. The body was brought to the coroner who held an inquest resulting in a verdict in accordance with the above. Deceased will be buried from the undertaking rooms this afternoon.

Preparations for commencement of work in California on the 70-mile gap of the California and Oregon railroad are being completed, and work will be begun immediately. A contract for masonry on bridges and culverts has been let. The work to be accomplished will take about two and one-half years to finish. The railroad is one of the branches of the Central Pacific road.

A look through Uppertown shows that considerable improvement is being made in the matter of grading, building, setting out plants and trees and otherwise adorning what is already a beautiful natural site for that portion of the coming great city: the future Astoria, extending from Smiths Point to Tongue Point, with long lines of docks crowded with a foreign fleet carrying the products of the Columbia across the sea.

Nothing, certainly, could be more attractive than the June number of the Illustrated Californian. The opening article is entitled "The Tax Redwoods," and gives a spirited description of the Coast Redwoods and the big trees. A number of fine pictures accompany this article. Mrs. Victor continues her studies of the California Mission. These two beautifully illustrated papers on the Redwoods and the Missions should be read by every one.
