The Seattle small-pox excitement has abated. Peter Carlsen was released on bail yesterday. Dog carts are becoming fashionable in Astoria this season. Two drunks and one vagrant were recipients of even handed justice at the police court yesterday.

C. Richardson, one of the old pioneers of Yamhill county is lying dangerously ill at the hospital. At two o'clock yesterday morning a Portland fire burned a frame range corner of First and Alder streets. Loss $4,000; incendiary; insured.

Messrs. Holt Bros. moved their pile driver up on the street yesterday, having finished driving. The job cost $2,200. The work of framing the foundation now goes on. Beautiful mornings; glorious sunrises; brilliant sunsets; gorgeous colorings; emerald pines; glancing sunlight; sparkling water; misty clouds; far-off mountains; fill in to suit taste.

The Rev. A. La Due will preach in the school house, upper Astoria, Saturday evening at 8 o'clock, and Sunday at 11 o'clock, and in the evening. Mr. La Due has lately arrived from Pennsylvania. Capt. Nicholson, of the British steamer Glenelg, was fined $5,250 in the U. S. district court last Wednesday for having carried from Hongkong 105 passengers in excess of the number permitted by law.

The boys are getting it down pretty fine. To run from the bell tower to THE ASTORIAN corner and throw water in one minute and thirty—something, is quick work. A minute and a half is the limit.

The Wanlock, which goes to London direct, has on 2,280 cases of salmon from the Astoria Packing company, 5,000 from John West, and 4,000 from Wm. Hume. She also carries 9,458 sacks of flour.

The next Oregon legislature will stand 16 Republicans to 14 Democrats in the Senate, and 36 Republicans to 25 Democrats in the House. There is a tie in Yamhill county on the Representative, which will be settled by special election on the 1st prox.

To one who believes in the future greatness of the domain 'tis a cheering sight to see the great number of immigrants that are coming in on every steamer. They all seem to be of that class "that come to stay," and there is room for hundreds of thousands more.

It seems to be the sentiment of the firmest of this city that they will not attend the Astoria tournament on the Fourth of July. The interest of the city requires the engines to be ready in case of fire. It is thought, however, that No. 2's company will take their engine down. Portland Standard, 14th.

They will probably think better of it before the 4th. If they can't bring their engines they can send down a delegation who will be given the use of our apparatus while here.

The General Miles is the largest and finest vessel of the many built at Astoria. She is one of the steamers owned by the Ilwaco Steam Navigation company; the board of directors are L. A. Loomis, J. H. D. Gray, H. S. Gile, L. H. Rhodes and I. A. Clarke. Her machinery indicates 257 horse power though 'tis thought it may exceed that. To-day the smoke stack, etc., will be put in position, and about the 1st of July she will make her trial trip.

The Launch of the Gen. Miles. Build me straight, O worthy master! Staunch and strong, a speedy vessel. That shall laugh at all disaster. And with wave and whirlwind wrestle!

A thousand people went down to the beach yesterday to see the Gen. Miles launched. Over the opal dome of ocean glowed the sun from his throne of cloudless blue. To the east the rounded outlines of the green promontory of Tongue point were lost in the silvery mist that lay in twining wreaths along the flashing water. To the north the giant pines that from the storm-swept heights upon the chafing tide were robed in amber glory of resplendent light. Far out to sea the tossing waves rose high and fell in foaming flakes as the great surge of the Pacific swept thundering in upon the rocky cliffs. Myriads of white-winged gulls came dancing in upon the flood. Over head wheeled the screaming sea birds; fifty flags fluttered from the surrounding vessels and the thunder of the tide was heard above the hum of the crowd, as it rushed in might along the sounding shore. The scene was set for the occasion; earth and air and sky were in harmony; the vessel gay with streamers and many colored bunting, the brilliant costumes of the ladies who graced the occasion with their presence, the busy crowd, the stream of sight-seers pressing up the vessel's side and curiously inspecting everything above and below and within and without; and over all the great silent architect, the sun, who raised and wrought the beams of the stout craft that stood ready to swing into the waiting tide that rose and lapsed but thirty feet away. Up and down went Whelan, the builder, with watchful eye, tightening here and loosening there, while the men followed his every direction, until, all being ready, he, with a gesture of command, waved his hand: And at the word, Loud and sudden there was heard the sound of hammers, blow on blow. Knocking away the shores and spurs, and sea! She starts! She starts—she starts—she starts to feel the thrill of life along her keel. And, springing with her foot the ground, With one bounding, joyful bound, She leaps into the ocean's arms!

One moment silent and inert, a mass of senseless wood; the next, gliding gracefully in her element she proudly rode the tossing wave, and rounding to, was thrown a line by the Canby and towed to the dock. As she swept down the polished ways to the water, Miss Ella Gile broke the customary bottle of champagne over the bow, the steamer colors were unfurled and her flag floated to the breeze amid the cheers of the crowd, the booming of guns and the shrill salute of the vessels and factories in the neighborhood. The launch was in every sense a success, and all concerned are congratulated on the pleasant auspices of the occasion that marked the launching of the finest vessel ever built in Astoria.

The Man and the Goose. A man was plucking a free goose, when his victim addressed him thus: "Suppose you were a goose, do you think you would relish this sort of thing?" "Well, suppose I were," answered the man, "do you think you would like to pluck me?" "Indeed I would," was the emphatic, natural, but injudicious, reply. "Just so," concluded her tormentor, "that's the way I feel about the matter."

The Hook & Ladder Co. made fair time last night—ran 300 yards, got up 20 foot ladder with man on top in 1:17. The Chinese theater is "a big thing," and, we understand, that it is not patronized by Mongolians exclusively.

There will be a sociable and ice cream and strawberry festival at the skating rink this evening under the auspices of the ladies of the Presbyterian church. The delightful nature of these socials coupled with the good purpose for which they are held, should insure a most liberal attendance.

Hixson, representing the popular Merchant Tailoring House of Gordon Bros., San Francisco, is stopping a few days at the Occident, where he has on exhibition a full line of samples of goods for gentlemen's wear for the present and coming season. PRESENTIMENTS. An Investigation of the Causes of These Dark Forebodings which Make Powerful Men Weak.

Golden Rule. Much apprehension has been occasioned throughout America from the announcement made by Professor Proctor that the return in nineteen years of the great comet of 1843, will cause the destruction of the earth. But while people are becoming so strangely exercised over this announcement, an event of far more serious importance which is taking place to-day, seems to be almost wholly overlooked. The nature of this most vital subject can be best explained by relating the following experience. Bishop O. Haven, known to the entire land, was unconsciously awakened one night out of a sound sleep, and lay awake until morning. His mind seemed unusually active, and he was only recalling his past life, which had been an eventful one, but did not feel especially ill, but could not account for the unusual activity of his brain, nor for the restlessness which seemed to possess him. In the morning he had but little appetite, but was apparently well in other respects. In the day, however, he began to feel morbid and restless, although he tried earnestly to overcome the feeling that had taken possession of him. But try as he would, the shadow of some evil seemed to follow him, and he was conscious of a gradual sinking and wasting away of all his physical faculties. He had been a earnest and diligent worker, and in his zeal frequently over-taxed his strength, and being absorbed in his duties, failed to observe the common symptoms with which he was afflicted. He had been the subject of work of destruction to go on unheeded. But the end finally came in a most perceptible manner. Shortly before his death he wrote a letter to his wife, in which he speaks as follows: "A belief that death is near afflicts different minds differently, but probably all who are in a fair condition of physical and mental strength, perceive the shadow of some evil which he leaves behind him as he goes. The recent sad and sudden death of Hon. Clarkson N. Potter is one of the most serious warnings ever given in the long list of eminent men who have been neglected. It is not sufficient to say that many other brilliant men, including Everett, Sumner, Chase, Wood, Wilson and Carpenter, were in the same predicament. The question is, were these men sufficiently careful of their health, and could they have saved themselves? The Albany Argosy, in speaking of Mr. Potter's sudden illness and death, says: "One of the physicians who attended Mr. Potter here was interviewed last evening. He stated that Mr. Potter's inability to converse had for some time served to baffle the physicians in their efforts to determine the root of his illness. It seems, however, that Mr. Potter, some two years ago, suffered a slight attack of kidney disease. Unwise dependence upon a robust constitution and naturally perfect health, and neglect of proper clothing, doubtless sowed the seeds of a disease that needed but some such personal neglect as that of Tuesday morning to develop. From the symptoms at first shown it was thought that his only trouble was a nervous prostration, but his long continuance in a semi-conscious state led to the belief that his illness was seated in a chronic difficulty more mysterious and dangerous."

Up to the latter part of last year Mr. Edward F. Rook, a member of the New York stock exchange, was doing business in Wall street. New York. He had everything to encourage him and make life happy, but was the victim of unaccountable uneasiness. His experience, as described by one who knew, was as follows: "At unexpected times and on occasions when he had the greatest reason to feel joyous he was irritable and haunted with strange feelings of discontent. He endeavored to cheer himself by the recollection of a distant and pleasant home, but it required a great effort to do so; after which he would relate into his former morbid mood. This feeling continued for a number of days, and he was unable to enjoy a moment of rest. He then consulted other eminent doctors of another school and was informed that he had a brain difficulty somewhat in the nature of a tumor, but in spite of all efforts to the contrary he continued to grow worse. At this time his condition was terrible. What were at first simple symptoms had developed to terrible troubles. His head ached, he was constantly uneasy, and yet always weary. He had an intense appetite one day and very little the next. His pulse was irregular, his breathing labored, and every moment he was waiting for his power to hold the breath. The use of SOZODONT is invaluable because it removes the tartar which separates the teeth and gums.
