THE CITY.

THE DAILY ASTORIAN will be sent by mail at 75 cents a month, free of postage. Readers who contemplate absence from the city can have THE ASTORIAN follow them, DAILY or WEEKLY editions to any post-office without additional expense. Addresses may be changed as often as desired. Leave orders at the counting room.

Robert Burwick fell dead in Albany last Tuesday morning.

The Glenelg arrived down yesterday and will sail for Hongkong to-day.

Sixty cents a bushel is offered for new wheat in Walla Walla.

Little bills from the W. U. Telegraph company were being collected yesterday.

The Oregon is due this morning with 86 cabin passengers—an unusually small number.

The grounds around the Custom House are being improved, and substantial walks afford dry footing.

Mr. Frank James, brother of the late Jesse James, Esq., has declined to run for governor of Missouri.

Spring chickens are ripe, and are being picked. When their feathers are all picked off then they are "dressed."

The county court met yesterday and after transacting some probate business adjourned till ten o'clock this morning.

A broken bridge on the O. & C. railroad, just north of Aurora, let nine freight cars into the water last Tuesday morning.

Red Boy, an Oregon horse, is to have a race with a Colorado horse named Wildmoor. The distance is one mile and a half, to be run at Salt Lake city.

Lip Mong, who dropped dead on the Fleetwood while en route to Portland, furnishes the regular Chinese item. These Mongolians have their uses after all.

The managing committee respectfully ask all citizens to decorate their houses and places of business with bunting and evergreens, on the days of the coming festivities.

She said she had no wood cut, and he told her to get a steel engraving then. This came out in the testimony, but the judge decided there was hardly sufficient grounds for divorce.

The published diary of the unfortunate De Long portrays a horrible scene of suffering. He died on the 1st of November, after seeing his companions perish of starvation around him.

Henry Masuck, a Portland member of the Improved Order of Red Men, is missing, and it is believed that he is drowned. Any information concerning him will be gratefully received by Humbel.

The spring run of salmon in Rogue river, says the Coast Mail, has been one of the largest ever known in that stream. Hume has had more fish than he could handle in his cannery, and has put up a great many in barrels.

Niagara Falls fishermen have a novel way of catching bass. A boat is rowed along close to the shore, and the water between the shore and the boat being struck with an oar, the fish leap into the boat. Large quantities are caught in this way.

The old engine house alongside the city hall is being fixed up in good shape, and when the visiting firemen come down next Monday and Tuesday, they'll be given a hearty welcome and a dish of clam chowder which will sit lightly on their hearts and stomachs for the day.

Parties who live in the vicinity of Liberty Hall, complain that the Chinese raise such a bedlam there that it is an almost intolerable nuisance. Picnic is picnic, but that's no picnic; it isn't a bit funny to be kept awake by demoniacal screeching and clanging of cans and kettles all night.

Council Proceedings.

The council met in regular session last Tuesday, Mayor Hahn presiding; a full board present except Councilman Gray.

A petition from citizens asking the council to have the Chinese theater at Liberty Hall discontinued, was read, and on motion, referred to the committee on health and police, together with the city attorney. A petition from John Williamson asking permission to mow the grass in the city cemetery, was read, and on motion, petition was granted. A petition from J. M. Shively asking permission to drive piles to ship channel in front of lots 1, 2, 3, 4, 5 and 6 in block 149, Shively's Astoria, preparatory to building thereon, was read, and on motion, referred to the committee on wharves and water frontage. A petition from the managing committee of the Fremont's tournament and celebration of the 4th of July, asking the council to donate $100 on that occasion, was read, and on motion, referred to committee on ways and means.

CLAIMS.

The following claims against the city were ordered paid: G. V. Hobson, $10.20; I. W. Case, $20.35; T. J. McClanahan, $7.50; Theo. Broemser, $60.85; J. F. Halloran & Co., $97.99; J. W. Gearhart, $18.25; Moses Rogers, $7.50. The following claims were referred: Arndt & Ferchen, $66.85, to committee on public property; Theo. Broemser, $3.75, to committee on health and police.

The Mayor appointed Councilman Gray on the committees of ways and means, public property, and rules and regulations. The matter of purchasing a safe for the city hall was introduced by Councilman Case, and referred to committee on ways and means. To the committee on public property was referred Councilman Taylor's motion respecting the painting of the city hall. On motion, the council adjourned till to-morrow, the 30th inst.

The Usual Growl.

In talking about salmon statistics the San Francisco Bulletin gets in its usual growl. In reference to the cargo of the Langrigg Hall it says: "The vessel is reported to have cleared with 40,800 cases, but the list of shippers as published by the Commercial Reporter of Portland only gives 37,000 cases. It is an even thing that neither figure is correct. Oregon commercial papers boast of a great deal of accuracy in their statements, but beyond the boast the analogy ceases."

This cheap sneer is just like the Bulletin. We have detected that paper in errors so often that we have ceased to place any confidence in its statements. We reported the cargo of the Langrigg Hall correctly, as usual; our published figures are always obtained from Mr. Brown, of the custom house, and we have yet to hear any contradiction of their accuracy from a reliable quarter. It may be in order to ask the commercial editor of the Bulletin if he knows what "analogy" means. He should overhaul his little Webster. We might also suggest, en passant, that the vessel in question did not, as he states, complete her cargo and then "drop down to Astoria."

Astoria's Scenery.

In these pleasant days of June, 'tis sometimes wholesome to leave the daily round of duties and ramble over the lofty hills that stretch away to the southward from our bustling little city. Items and editorials alike discarded, and no comp. to call for "copy," one can revel undisturbed in the surpassing beauty of the natural scenery that these sloping mountain ranges show in leaty June. These green-walled cliffs that on the other side of Young's river, rising in majesty from the sea, whether seen in the gold and gray of early morning, beneath the sapphire sky of noon, or the roseate flush of sunset, afford a quiet joy to those who weary of the noise and din of daily life and rest for a season within their quiet shadow. To fully appreciate all the landscape splendor of mountain scenery, one must not be too near. The graceful harmony of the scene is enhanced by partial separation from that upon which we look, and much of the changing beauty depends upon the hour at which we view it. When beyond the farthest peak the morning sky is hung with fleecy clouds, the mountains with their somber fronts, present a far different appearance to what they do in the broad glare of noon, or that grandest hour when earth and air and sunset sky are transfigured, and crag and forest pine and rocky tower, are lit up with a radiance that is as dazzling in its effect as it is brief in its duration.

"There's nothing good or bad in this world, but thinking makes it so," says Hamlet; yet to those who say a mountain is a mountain and you can't make anything else out of it, it needs but a day of actual experiment to show that as much depends on the time and location in viewing mountain scenery as does on the time and place in any of the actions or transactions of everyday life.

In the kindling orange light of dawn, when the deep azure of the western verge that lies upon the sea is paling to an exquisite violet, and far down the canyons the cool mists of morning are floating round its gloomy base, and high above, the morning star that glitters over the peak seems receding slowly through the waves of rosy light that pour from the east, the mountain, that with alacrity front looked so gray and grim, seems to wake into life and change in form and expression as the arching beams of sunlight fill the air with dusty gold and the dazzling splendor of the newborn day calls up, near by, the birds, God's choristers, that fit like animated gems from branch to branch and make the forests vocal.

During these glorious days, and more especially the afternoons, the great masses of summer clouds that float toward the summits throw rich, reflected coloring on the mountain side. A magnificent sight, indeed, to see a cloud whose area is to be measured by the square mile, sweeping over the landscape, where now the stately pines are resplendent in green and gold, and now in softened shadow that shows more delicate shades of emerald, and again lighting into renewed glory as the cloud shadow photographs itself on peaks too remote to be dimmed by its presence.

But it is at sunset when the transcendent glory of the scene is most apparent, when shattered rock and shingly slate and broken basalt and long cathedral aisles of pine are surrounded and resplendent with a blaze of evening gold and glowing scarlet and deepest crimson that blends and softens in purple and violet shades of twilight and gray and dusk as the shadows thicken and the glorious stars come out in gleaming line for the grand nightly review of the Creator. When overhead is a delicate web of lace-like clouds, creamy white and rosy gray; in the east a fading gleam of purple; in the west, where dipped the sun into the sea, a tint of richest chrysopease, half-green, half blue; far beyond and above, piled against the eastern sky, lie lateral lines of cumuli furrowed with crinkling gold and jagged scarlet, number in the center but edged with sunshine; on nearer slopes, the rustling murmur of the breeze among the waving pines, as though nature were running her hand over the key-board of the creation, striking here and there a chord, before beginning the majestic symphony of the night, when the great arches of light shall have been lifted into apparition, and half of our swinging little planet lies wrapped in shadow. Such sights and scenes as these form a pleasant retrospect, which hangs as a picture upon the shadowy walls of memory.

If you have rheumatism call on Dr. Wells at the Parker House. He is having great success.
