

The proposition to give extended powers to the executive, by constitutional amendment, so that it shall take two-thirds of the members of each house to pass a bill over the president's veto, instead of two-thirds of the members voting, would be so unpopular that if brought before the different states, there is not one in the union that would be in favor of it. It was introduced by Hutches, a Democratic member from New York City. The veto power of the president, instead of being enlarged, should be greatly restricted. It is an anti-republican feature of our government, giving the president monarchical powers and enabling him, at times, to set aside the will of the people as expressed by their immediate representatives, the senators and members of congress. There has not been a veto of an act of parliament by any British sovereign within the last one hundred years, nor would any of the limited monarchs of Europe dare do such an act. Why, then, should the president be permitted to set up his individual opinion against congress? To justify such action is to concede to him infallibility. The one-man power does not conform to the institutions of this country.

It is claimed that the uses of adversity are sweet. Most people are only able to become wise through impressive experiences. No amount of precept influences them. They must know practically before they will believe. This is the reason why humanity does not get along faster than it does. If each rising generation were only secure in the possession of what the departing one had found out—if a child could begin where the parent left off—there is no telling to what a state of development man might have reached. But every one has to go through pretty much the same mill and find out for himself. He will take no one's word for it. The race probably slowly accumulates knowledge that is condensed into a kind of instinct and transmitted hereditarily, thus enabling one generation to go, say, just a hair's breadth farther than its predecessor, which process accounts for the development that is claimed to be going on. As a rule, however, men have to be constantly referred to what the wise course is by the penalty that comes from walking out of it.

One of the recipients of Jay Hubbell's circulars, is assessed seven dollars, though he has government employment only about one hundred days in the year. He is a feeble old man, eighty years of age. Another one of the "volunteer" contributors, is a boy twelve years old who works in the Brooklyn navy yard for a dollar a day, and supports his mother. His voluntary contribution is fixed at just six dollars and twenty cents. The Republican party won its greatest triumph when it had not a single man in office, and it will go down in disgrace if the present scandalous conduct is not rebuked by men who believe in Republican principles and desire the party to live for the good it may still be capable of doing.

Just as we expected. The Ottawa Free Press publishes a statement from W. P. Lett, of that city, to the effect that the now famous Arabi Bey and Patrick M. Foley, a former resident of the dominion, is one and the same person. He is said to have gone to Egypt some six years ago and by cunning and pluck rose to his present eminence. His alias is not Arabi Bey, but arrah beaisy.

WALLA WALLA wheat has begun to arrive at upper river points in large quantities. An average of 150 tons is daily received at Bonneville.

LATE advices from Egypt indicate that the Sultan of Turkey has agreed to issue a proclamation declaring Arabi Bey a rebel, and will also proceed to send over Turkish troops to act in conjunction with the English. And so goes the forcible foreclosure of the mortgage.

The Seattle Herald is of the opinion that "the day is not far distant when Washington will arise in her might like a young giantess and throw off once and forever this gross incubus of Oregon injustice which has so long fettered her limbs."
