The Victoria comes down to-day. East Portland is to have a gas company. Regular trains will begin running into Pendleton next Monday. Hon. C. W. Fulton leaves for Salem on this morning's boat. Holden advertises his regular auction sale at two o'clock to-day. Portland's new dredger was launched at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Fine deer hunting is reported from the headwaters of Lewis and Clarke. The Washington territory university has been re-organized, and will be opened on the 20th inst. As soon as the alterations in the E. N. Cook are finished she will be used exclusively for towing. The steamship Walla Walla came down the river yesterday and leaves for the Sound this morning. Consul-General Denny is en route from Shanghai, and will arrive home about the 1st of October. The San Francisco mint coined $6,120,000 during August. Our portion of it has not come to hand yet. Lane county will have 300,000 pounds of hops this season; there's money in the culture of that sedative. The new steamship Queen of the Pacific will sail from San Francisco for Astoria and Portland next Saturday. The new Presbyterian church is fast approaching completion. E. R. Hawes is putting in a Boynton furnace. Portland is preparing a new city charter, to be submitted to the legislature. It extends the boundaries of the city. The American ship Astoria, Anderson master, arrived in yesterday, 161 days from New York, with railroad iron. One hundred and fifty thousand dollars have been expended here in building and building improvements during the present season. The O. R. & N. dock is being put in good shape, extensive repairs and improvements have been in progress for the past three weeks. Proposals will be received at the office of the Columbia Canning company till noon to-day to furnish material for and build a cannery. There is considerable sickness at present in the city; a species of bowel complaint appearing to be epidemic, so general is the prevalence of the complaint. Breasts will by no means have a walk-over at the coming Territorial Republican convention. Dr. Minor, of western Washington will be his competitor. The Yaquina arrived in yesterday morning from Coos bay and Yaquina with a miscellaneous cargo of coal, lumber, broom handles, match wood, etc. Her next trip will be to the Sound. Considerable dissatisfaction is expressed about the delay and disappointment entailed by the non-arrival of San Francisco freight. 'Tis too bad, but one of those things that can't be helped. Mitchell Davol has discovered upon his farm an underlying stratum of silicon, which puts a shine on tin and brass that makes those useful metals glitter like silver. He proposes to can all he can mine and mine all he can can.

Et tu Brute! We have always believed that the local editor of the Standard was a man of veracity, and are sorry to lower him from that high place in our estimation that heretofore he has held. Our reason is the appearance in yesterday's issue of that estimable journal, of the following: "Mr. Frank Parker, editor of the Walla Walla Statesman, has invested $10,000 in Albina property." Such actions on the part of a newspaper man are outside of possibility or belief.

Domestic Salmon Shipments. Sept. 6th, State of California: C. Co., 1,200; A. Booth, 2,174; South Pkg. Co., 23; Eureka Pkg. Co., 23; Astoria Pkg. Co., 878; Wm. Hume, 15; S.D. Adair, 290. Total, 4,580.

The Town Talk tells a long yarn to the effect that on last Saturday, about nine miles below Salem, the bed of the Willamette broke through, letting the water run into the earth and causing a cessation of all outward flow for more than three hours till the chasm was filled. Carpenters and builders are making the most of the fine weather and are pushing to completion all the outside work that it is possible to finish. A lack of cement prevents the continuance of work on the new building across the street, but that will be only a temporary delay. E. C. Holden invites, in another column, parties interested in the forthcoming auction of Barrow's farm and stock of dairy cows, to accompany him on a visit to the place to examine the property to be sold on Tuesday morning next. The steamer Daisy will convey the party and return to the city in the afternoon of same day. The Gen. Miles is off for Shoalwater Bay this morning to bring over a load of oysters. The bivalves of that section are improving, and what they lack in size they make up in quality. Miss Nellie Holbrook, when in San Francisco happened to be asked by a friend if she had played in Astoria. "Oh yes," was the answer of the charming actress; "that's where I ate three hundred oysters one night."

Few things are of more importance in early life than the formation of correct principles, and in educational institutions the element of morality, and the attribute of moral surroundings are the most important factors in the achievement of this necessary result. In this case reference is made directly to St. Helen's Hall, a state institution and one deserving of the patronage of our citizens. Its influence is for good and its educational advantages are second to none. Such days as these who away to the souls of those who feel entitled to a rest and off they go who can, some to fish in adjacent bays and rivers, some to hunt the deer in the mountains and on the headwaters of mountain streams, and others to adopt kindred styles of varying work and calling into action a different set of nerves and muscles than are employed in the routine of daily life. Those who have nothing to do are in one extreme, those who have too much are in the other; the golden mean in such golden days as the present is to let the procession go by without trying to keep step, to "break ranks" and hunt a shady and secluded spot and fill up on clams and oysters, and spring water, etc.

By the last steamer Gustav Hansen, the jeweler, received a consignment of guitars, violins, accordions, guitar and violin strings, etc., which are of fine quality and sold at low price.

In The Depths. "I've been on this water front now about eight years." This remark came in jerks and hesitatingly from an old and decrepit creature whom a Chronicle reporter chanced to meet during his rounds along the wharves. "Yes, sir, I've been making my living just this way for a long time—picking up old nails, broken bits of iron and old junk of all kinds. It's very hard for one to get along sometimes, you know, when I can't be around. But I've been pretty well, lately," added the little old man cheerfully, "and have been able to earn a pretty good living."

"How much can you make a day?" inquired the reporter. "Sometimes I make as much as two o-bits, when I work hard; then on other days I don't make but ten cents. That's not much to you, is it? But I live on it—I have to, or else starve. "How much do you get for what you work so hard for?" "Half a cent a pound. Been getting that all along."

"Do you have a good place to sleep?" To this last interrogatory the old man answered with a nod. The tears had just started, one from each eye, and running down each cheek, left behind two tracks, on the edge of which was the dirt that had accumulated for weeks. When this slight disturbance of his finer sensibilities had been smothered, he continued with his story and said that years ago he was the sole owner of a 200-acre ranch in San Mateo county, and that designing friends robbed him, thus throwing him upon the charity of the world.

"Old man," said the reporter, "what do you get to eat?" "Oh, sometimes I get coffee, and with it I eat bread or stale doughnuts; other times, when I have made a good deal of money, I get myself some meat, but not often—not often."

"It'll be pretty hard on you when the rains come, won't it?" "Yes, I guess it will," he said simply, "but I'll weather it out, and some day—some day, I'll die, I guess; die, and most likely find a grave down there."
