Exit, Thayer---Enter Moody.

THE retiring governor, W. W. Thayer, sent a message to the Oregon legislature last Wednesday which is a comprehensive document. It deals with questions of state interest and public concern and is a review of that official's administration. From it we learn that the receipts of the state for 1881 and 1882 aggregate $510,000: the expenses for the same time have been $400,000. The different topics of interest are discussed at length, pilotage and towage on the bar, and the hatching of salmon, being discoursed upon and suggestions made in reference thereto. It is an able production, and one creditable to our retiring chief magistrate.

Gov. Moody, upon assuming charge of the state craft, sent the legislature a message in which he thinks that the present system of taxation should be modified, that the system of free schools should receive encouragement, and asserts that "railroad companies and all other corporations engaged in public enterprises should be controlled by statute in such a manner as will work for the best interest of state and corporation," all of which the majority of the people will assent to.

Despite its regular occurrence and the fact of taking it as a matter of course, there is always, to us, something sublime in the easy, noiseless way in which public servants succeed each other. Lincoln dies, and though the hearts of 38,000,000 people stand still for an instant at the intelligence, yet Andrew Johnson quietly takes the oath of office and the wheels of government move on without a jar. Garfield dies and Arthur rides to Washington and takes the oath, and all things go on in every government department as before. The votes of a constituency remove a man or select his successor, and with a little brief formality the official steps down and his successor takes his place to give way in turn to him who follows. It is one of the grandest attributes of our republican form of government.

Revenue vs. Protection.

An ideal revenue duty upon any article is the largest duty which can be levied upon that article without diminishing the compensation. As soon as the duty reaches the point at which it invites the production of a competing and untaxable article in the country by which it is levied, it restricts importation, and therefore diminishes revenue, precisely in proportions as it stimulates the production of native industry. In other words, as soon as it becomes a protective duty and as far as it becomes a protective duty, it ceases to be a revenue duty. A tariff which is a mixed revenue and protective tariff, as the tariff of the United States generally is, is a tariff which, while deriving some revenue from that part of the supply which is imported, so enhances the price and diminishes the importation of the imported article thereby diminishing the revenue from it, as to make it profitable to manufacture here a part of the supply. It is conceivable that by increasing the rate of duty in precise proportion to the falling off in the importation of dutiable goods, a few factories might be kept going at the manufacture of an article the bulk of which was imported, and that the maximum of revenue might still be obtainable from it. But such an adjustment would by no means meet the views of the native manufacturer, who is the author of the existing tariff; nor would it at all invalidate the general proposition that in a mixed revenue and protective tariff, as in every other kind of tariff, the principle of protection is directly opposed to the principle of revenue.

AUCTION SALE.

Friday, September 15, 11 A. M.
On the Premises.

700 Acres! Dairy or Stock Farm.

and Valuable Timber Land.

50 Dairy Cows, 2 Three-quarter Jersey Bulls, 2 Horses.
1 Yoke Work Oxen, 2 Milk Wagons, Farm and Dairy Implements and Furniture.
50 tons Hay.

Instructed by Mr. J. F. Barrows, I will sell as above, in sections or as a whole, the above Valuable Property.

It is situated on Lewis and Clark's River, 7 miles south of Astoria, and 2½ miles from Clatsop beach. There is a good steamboat landing which is accessible to any of the O. R. & N. Co's river steamboats. About half of the 700 acres is tide land, well bridged, on which cattle keep fat the year round. The other half, level timber land, and about 200 acres in tame grass. Thousands of cords of hemlock, fir and spruce can be cut, worth two dollars and a half at the landing to which there is a good wagon road from all points. Every cord cut finds a ready market. In addition, there is any quantity of mill lumber and good piles. Good dwelling house, barn, and necessary outhouses, with an orchard of 10 or 12 acres containing almost all kinds of fruit bearing trees, etc., etc. This desirable property has a frontage of two miles on the river bank, and is admirably adapted for settlement by a company desiring to colonize, as it is large enough to divide into several farms and homesteads. The contemplated bridge between Astoria and Clatsop plains connects on this property.

All the Live Stock and personal property will be sold separately to the highest bidders, for cash. Terms of payment for the land will be announced at sale.

A Steamer will be ready on morning of sale to convey intending bidders to and from the Sale, free of charge.
