The Story of the Star Rontes.

THE Star route cases, which have been dragging their slow length courts for several weeks past, are terminated by a mixed verdict. It is not unlikely that many persons may have lost what might be called the thread of the story on which these cases were founded. The Star route, says the Bulletin, implied an ingenious device for robbing the Treasury out of several millions of dollars annually. Contracts for carrying the mail are let out for four years at Washington, The modus operandi in the cases under coasideration was to expedite the mails on routes in distant and sparsely-settled portions of the country. The expediting of routes is left by law discretionary with the postmaster-general. When a route is changed from a weekly trip to semi-weekly trips or daily trips, the expense is increased in something like geometrical ratio. There are no more than two or three letters carried on some of these routes, and there is no efficient method of determining the manner in which the service is performed.

the states of Louisiana, Texas. Kansas, Nebraska, Colorado, Oregon, Nevada and California, and in the Territories of Dakota, Montana, New Mexico, Arizona, Utah, Idaho and Washington. The mails were carried on the Star routes in these states and territories for the four years' term ending June, General Commission Merchants 1878, for $2,944,049 per annum. By the expediting process this was Next to Oregon Rallway & Nav. co's Dock increased in 1879 to $3,553,566.

Another million was added at the expiration of that year, for the amount went up to $4,520,821 for 1880. All this occurred during FEET DRY! the administration of President Haves.
