

The Daily Astorian.

ASTORIA, OREGON: SUNDAY, OCTOBER 1, 1882

J. F. HALLORAN, Editor

Chiefly About Personal Matters.

To-day begins a new volume--this issue being No. 1, of Vol. 18, of THE DAILY ASTORIAN.

One year ago we assumed control of the paper, and by working sixteen hours out of the twenty-four, continuously every day since, have been able to pay our bills for labor and supplies.

In such unremitting exertion we look more to the future than the present for compensation.

The Astoria of to-day is far ahead of the Astoria of a year ago; there are more people, more houses, more money.

The future of the city is a bright one, and it shall be our intent and constant desire to make THE ASTORIAN an exponent of the place.

The paper is not in every respect what we would wish to have it; none note more keenly than we its defects, but our field is somewhat limited; and everyone remembers the homely adage, "you must creep before you can walk."

We feel thankful to our patrons and subscribers for their appreciative efforts to help us, and would suggest in this connection that the newspaper published in a place is always a constant advertisement of and for the place.

Our subscription list can be increased materially by residents of the city, and we know of nothing that would help the place more than the dissemination of information regarding this section of the northwest--its resources and attractions to settlers.

Every week we send a large number of papers to all parts of the country, and in this way call attention to the many advantages of the place.

The promises we made the reading public a year ago have been kept to the best of our ability, and as we said then, so now, that THE ASTORIAN shall continue to have an independent opinion on all points within the jurisdiction of a newspaper, shall hold to what it believes to be right, and shall answer all objections by stating the truth as it appears to us.

We are well aware that we have not succeeded in pleasing every one, but as that is an impossibility, the fact modifies our regret.

We shall continue to avoid, as far as possible, all personalities, shall try to be just, and shall be always willing to concede to others the consistency we claim for ourselves, uttering our honest sentiments in such a way that those who differ from us can at least respect the opinion uttered.

The paper shall continue to work for the good and material benefit of the city, county and state, shall foster and support every enterprise looking to the interest of the community and shall advocate the development of Clatsop county's resources.

We shall continue to be chary of promises, but shall try to do all that is promised, bearing in mind that while it is not always possible to secure success, it is always noble to deserve it.

There is a good deal of money due us here and there throughout the country for subscriptions, that we would be glad to receive.

To the individual it is not much, but two or three dollars here and there from a thousand different souls make an aggregate that would be of material assistance to us at present.

We are loth to dun our subscribers, but if they will send us the amount due for the current year we shall feel obliged. And this brings us to the end of our discourse.

THE Standard thinks that the evidence of Hon. B. F. Nichols does not seem to be very conclusive as to Bob Ford's attempt at bribery.

It looks very much as if Ford thought Nichols was one of the kind that needed assistance in his old age, and tried to find out his price. Nichols' evidence indicates that Ford acted on his own responsibility in the matter.

Church Going.

Here is a solemn sanctuary founded By God himself--not for transgressors meant.

But that the man oppressed, the spirit wounded, And all beneath the world's injustice bent,

May turn from outward care, turmoil and din.

To peace within.

It is but little to the credit of our city that the attendance at the churches is so small.

A full and regular attendance on public worship is of benefit to both the community and its members.

On the individual, the influence is all for good.

Saying nothing of the religious part of the matter--this being each one's own concern--it is a great deal that one can withdraw himself, if only for an hour in a week, from the cares and perplexities of everyday life, and raise himself to a higher plane of soul-being; can listen with the noise of the world shut out, to the voice of the better nature within him.

The physical effect of the quiet of a church, in soothing the nerves, is recognized by physiologists; and it is said that pugilists in training attend church regularly for the benefit secured by magnetic contact with a body of quiet worshippers.

Church attendance benefits the place by preserving the quiet of a day set apart by custom and law for rest to all, and sanctified by religion for worship by so very many.

Its good influence on the young is incalculable.

By its quiet pressure it keeps somewhat in check the unruly elements found in every community.

Though evil may exist, and even flourish, it stays in its own place and is, at least, not obtrusive.

The good impression a full and regular church attendance makes on the stranger within our gates is far-reaching; and is like bread cast on the waters--to return in increased population, credit abroad and prosperity at home.

A respectable settler with a family, inquires about the schools, but personally notices the churches.

To speak slightly of the pastoral service is not a sufficient answer. Were these men intellectual giants they would find a wider field, a larger harvest for their reaping.

To do all that the humblest of God's servants can tell us, is more than a life's work for most of us.

Certain it is a man comes out of the church with increased self-respect, for while there, as while in the company of good women, he is bound to behave himself.

To Correct an Evil.

ASTORIA, Sept. 30, 1882.

ED. ASTORIAN:

I HAVE a plan to recommend to the merchants and people of Astoria, who are now suffering from the exactions of the O.R. & N. Co.'s steamships, which persist in carrying freight past Astoria, which is destined for Astoria, and which discriminates against the place in rates of freight, and otherwise tries to injure the place.

It is simply this, to buy a good iron steamship of 1400 tons register, to run between Astoria and San Francisco.

This steamship to be filled up every trip with lumber as freight, from a large saw-mill to be erected here.

I would also have her carry passengers and through up freight.

In this way the steamer would always have a good paying business, and Astorians have their freight always landed at their own city.
