ASTORIA, OREGON. SUNDAY, OCTOBER 8, 1882. J. F. HALLORAN, Editor.

Capital Notes.

SENATE CHAMBER, SALEM, Oct. 6, 1882.

EDITOR ASTORIAN:

THE mists that have shrouded and enveloped the valley for days past, allowing only brief glimpses of the sun's welcome rays, culminated to-day in the shower of the season. How it did pour! making sombre music on the skylight of the capitol that occupies the place where the dome is to be.

"The summer is gone, the winter is near. A dreary mist o'er the woodland sways, While rattle the nuts from the windy limbs. From bough to bough the squirrels run, At the noise of the echoing hunter's gun. And the partridge flees when my foot-step leaves The rustling drift of the withering leaves."

Nearly every session, several little birds stray into the doors of the capitol, and naturally soaring high reach the skylight, and there flutter their lives away in vain endeavor to escape from their prison. Your correspondent has had a peculiar experience with these little creatures, in the capitol. While in the house at joint convention one year, a bird came and alighted on the hat, and tried to pick sweetness from the artificial flowers, and again this season at this same place, another little bird alighted on the table, near enough to touch the hand, and then fluttered away, to lose itself probably among the rafters and timbers of the building.

The views from the capitol building are very beautiful in every direction. Looking to the south it is to be seen the Willamette university and campus, to the west the Cascades with its crowning glory of Mts. Hood and Jefferson with their coverings of eternal snow, to the north stretches away Salem prairie with the fair grounds in the distance, while westward, more beautiful than all, is Wilson's Avenue with its variety of trees, extending to the court house (the handsomest in the state) and the green hills of Polk county dotted with farms stretching away into the dim distance.

The excitement attendant upon the ballot for United States senator has visibly abated the past week. The ladies do not come in such numbers, the "flutter" preceding the ballot is lacking, and the matter has become a routine business, like that of the regular order—first, second and third reading of bills, reading of petitions, memorials and remonstrances, reports of committees, etc. The regular work in the senate moves on smoothly until President McConnell announces, as he has done every day for the last twenty-four days, "the hour of 12 having expired the senate will now proceed to the hall of representatives for the purpose of balloting for United States senator," but to what "purpose" and with what results, the press or telegraph informs us each day. When the play will end and the curtain fall on the last scene, appears to be beyond mortal ken. It is a triangular duel, so to speak, showing a third of a party arrayed against two-thirds, with an opposing faction of thirty strong.

The greater number of the few bills that have passed relate to amendment of charters, or incorporation of towns. These passed "without a question." It appears that the question of salaries brings out eloquence in debate. An amusing episode occurred in discussing a bill to raise salaries of supreme and circuit judges. One member thought if the salary was not sufficient, the family should do something to help; to which another senator replied, "yes, and let the wives take in washing." Opinion was equally divided, but "tie" means "lost," and if the casting vote be "nay," the death knell is sounded. Probably one of the most important bills is senate bill No. 45, relating to pilotage on the Columbia river, introduced by Senator F. C. Reed, representing Clatsop, Tillamook and Columbia counties. Mr. Reed does not speak as often as many other members, but always to the point. And, by the way, as the result of observation for several sessions, it is conclusive that it is not always those who are given to "much speaking" that accomplish the most. "Still water, etc."

The senate counts a number of able speakers, among whom are Bilger of Lynn, Myers of Clackamas, Davenport of Marion, Siglin of Coos and Curry, Lee of Polk, Colvig of Douglas, Prin of Jackson, and Darris of Lane.

A bill has passed the senate, changing the time of meeting of the legislature to the second week in January. The senate is composed of a dignified set of gentlemen who are an honor to our fair state.

The young gentlemen who passed examination at the bar of the supreme court, were: George H. Thurston, W. M. Loyle, and R. P. Boise of Salem; W. W. Gibbs, C. J. Curtis, E. W. Morrison, J. N. Perry and P. J. Bentgen of Portland; Geo. S. Nolan, Geo. P. Darris, and J. E. Fenton of Eugene; W. L. Nutting and D. C. Latourrette of Oregon City; J. N. Hudson, Harrisburg; Eugene Brachett, Canyon City; B. F. Nichols, Pringle; M. C. Clifford, The Dalles; and Charles P. Sullivan of Lafayette. On the evening of the same day, the young gentlemen gave a banquet to their legal friends, and a few other guests, at which toasts were given and speeches made suitable to the occasion. The class is considered a valuable addition to the bar of Oregon.

Mrs. Governor Moody has named Wednesday afternoon and evening as her reception day, which makes a new and pleasant feature to that social element of the capital city. CHEMUKETA.

A PHILADELPHIA magistrate recently announced the law as saying that the owners of swarming bees is vested in the original possessor only so long as he can keep them in sight.
