

The Daily Astorian.

ASTORIA, OREGON: THURSDAY, OCTOBER 19, 1882 J. F. HALLORAN, Editor

The Salem Situation.

The present session of the Oregon legislature ends to-morrow night. Its record is an anomalous one. Ninety members elected to represent a constituency of 200,000 people go to the state capital, and after reigning forty days and forty nights disband and go home, their chief merit being what they didn't do in the matter of legislation, and their chief disgrace being what they didn't do in the matter of selection.

Then comes the question, can the governor appoint? It is not likely. In the event of a failure by the legislature to elect, the constitution does not empower the governor to usurp legislative functions by doing its work.

A FRENCH journal, the Gaulois, displays in its editorial columns a remarkable knowledge of American affairs. It gets matters dreadfully mixed. For instance, we are indebted to its enterprise for the information that the Arthurists, who evidently form an important political party, regard the late Mr. Guiteau as a victim, and are so covetous of relics that when his skeleton was taken to the museum a few days ago they mobbed the vehicle, broke the coffin open and carried away in triumph one hand and various other portions of the "preparation."

THE California railroad syndicate of Stanford, Crocker, Huntington and Hopkins, eighteen years ago, represented an aggregate capital of about $265,000. They are now listed as follows: Stanford, $80,000,000; Crocker, $40,000,000; Huntington, $50,000,000, and the Hopkins estate, $30,000,000.

THE fact that this is the one hundred-and-first anniversary of Cornwallis' surrender doesn't seem to awaken any extraordinary enthusiasm on the part of those who are always ready to celebrate.

EUROPEAN telegrams indicate that Gladstone will soon retire from public life.

Mexican Railroads.

THERE are two great systems of railway rapidly penetrating Mexico from the United States, one of these, the Mexican Central, progressing southward from El Paso, in New Mexico, toward the city of Mexico, 1,200 miles distant and of which 200 miles to Chihuahua have thus been completed; the other, the Mexican National Railway, progressing southwest from Corpus Christi, in Texas, toward the city of Mexico, 990 miles distant, and of which 333 miles of the main line from Corpus Christi to Monterey have been completed.

THE next time his boat runs aground and he has leisure for reflection, President Arthur should wrap the drapery of his special flag about him and sit down to profitable musings over the course of American history. John Tyler succeeded to the presidency through the death of Harrison, set about building up his own little party, and vanished into nothingness at the end of his term.

THERE is no man under the sun who does not feel the better, mentally and physically, for a day among the quail or ducks, or on the foaming brook with the electric shock of a two pounder thrilling him from his finger-ends clear down to his toes. There is no guile in the fields; no sin, no temptation. There is no wrangling of men, no care, but pure air, and the delight of space and the absence of daily care and attendant worry.

ABOUT 400,000 young beef cattle, the handling of which requires 2,000 men, and the selling value of which is over $5,000,000, have been driven north from Texas this year.
