—It is 12½ miles from Cape Hancock to Astoria.

—Rev. J. McCormac will preach on board the John O'Gaunt at 4 P. M.

—This is the season when those who go out to walk come back with bunches of delicately-tinted leaves.

—Regular service at Grace church, morning at 11; evening at 7. Sunday school after morning service.

—Congregational church—Preaching as usual at 11 A. M.; lecture at 7 P. M. Sunday school at noon.

—Among minor improvements let it not be overlooked that Grace church is now heated by two new stoves.

—Mr. C. W. Shively, clerk of school district No. 18, gives notice this morning that the tax list for that district is now in his hands.

—Regular services at the Methodist Episcopal church to-day. Preaching at 11 A. M. and 7 P. M. by the pastor. Sunday school at 12 M.

—Well! the legislature has adjourned; there is no use in trying to play a post mortem hand; simply "patience, and shuffle the cards."

—The Californian and Overland Monthly for November is received. It is a good number of a first-class publication, that should be encouraged by the reading population of the Pacific coast.

—Dean Blanchard is down from Ranier with his new steamboat, the John West. It is a pretty little craft, and will be used by the owner in towing from his mill to points on the Columbia river.

—The salmon bill (which was published in full in yesterday's ASTORIAN) passed both branches of the legislature and will be the law after receiving the governor's signature. He has already signed the pilot bill.

—How much more in accordance with "the eternal fitness of things" it would have been for the O. R. & N. Co., to have built their new dry dock at Young's bay, where it would have been of permanent value to them!

—White winter wheat, sowed in the Nehalem valley has produced a splendid yield this season. With the exception of Indian corn, this county can produce as fine crops of cereals as any section of the United States. Our summers are not hot enough to ripen Indian corn.

—Near Charlotte, N. C., a young son of Joe Faulkner was left in charge of his father's mill. While showing some playmates what he knew about the machinery he was caught in the belt and literally torn to pieces. This story has a kind of moral bearing on the fate of other "young sons" who think they understand political machinery.

—How do you like the way Clatsop county is treated in the matter of legislative apportionment? With 8,000 inhabitants we are given one-half a representative, and one-third of a senator. But that is as it was in the beginning, is now, and ever shall be world without end, till our citizens take public interest enough in their own affairs to change it.

Our Glorious Climate.

To the inhabitants of less favored climes who shiver for five months of the year amid surrounding ice and snow, and sigh for shade the other seven, it may be well to say that the inhabitants of this and adjoining counties enjoy a climate the year round that is the finest and healthiest in the world; the thermometer ranging during that period from 50 to 75 degrees. During the other months of the year comes a bountiful rain, insuring plentiful crops; and though occasionally a light fall of snow occurs about Christmas, yet its appearance is phenomenal, the thermometer rarely sinking below the freezing point, and for a large proportion of the time a man can work out of doors in his shirt sleeves.

The Closing Scene.

(Special to the Standard.)

SALEM, Oct. 20, 1882.

The final ballot by which Hon. J. N. Dolph was elected was concluded at 10 o'clock amidst intense excitement. The Democrats made a manly and persistent fight against time which, as the hour of adjournment approached, scared Republicans to Dolph for fear of losing an election. As the ballot progressed and it was seen that Mitchell's friends were voting for Dolph cheer upon cheer rang through the hall. When the result was announced Senator Dolph was called to the platform, introduced, and warmly welcomed by the audience. He returned thanks in a short and appropriate speech. Mr. Mitchell was called for and made a short speech and was vociferously cheered. The joint convention then adjourned. The senate and house held short sessions and closed up business in hand and then adjourned sine die.

Speaker McBride expressed his thanks to the members of the house for the courtesy and consideration extended by them during the session.

Mr. Ison tendered thanks in behalf of the Democratic members for gentlemanly and impartial treatment they had received at the hands of the speaker. All then crowded around the desk and took leave of Speaker McBride with warm congratulations.

Senator Dolph was serenaded and afterward held an impromptu reception at the Chemekota parlors, where he was warmly congratulated by numerous friends. Champagne flowed like water and universal joy reigned.

How to Secure Vast Crops.

Send ten cents to A. Vogeler & Co., Baltimore, Md., with your name and address and receive a copy of the Vennor Almanac for 1883, which will so thoroughly post the farmer upon the state of the weather, that he can run his farm for profit, and not experience only. The American News company of New York city will promptly supply book and news dealers desiring to handle the almanac.

Consumption in its early stages is readily cured by the use of Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery," though, if the lungs are wasted no medicine will effect a cure. No known remedy possesses such soothing and healing influence over all scrofulous, tuberculous, and pulmonary affections as the "Discovery." John Willis, of Elyria, Ohio, writes: "The 'Golden Medical Discovery, does positively cure consumption, as, after trying every other medicine in vain, this succeeded." Mr. Z. T. Phelps, of Cuthbert, Ga., writes: "The 'Golden Medical Discovery' has cured my wife of bronchitis and incipient consumption." Sold by druggists.

Loss of hair and grayness, which often mar the prettiest face, are prevented by Parker's Hair Balsam.

—Every lady should send 25 cents to Strawbridge & Clothier, Philadelphia, and receive their Fashion Quarterly for 6 months. 1000 Engravings and 4 pages new music each issue.

How the Salmon were Slaughtered Last Season.

"How are so many fish caught? I haven't noticed any nets."

"Nets are of no account now. Go and see the snail," said the captain, as he bent over and rang the slowing bell for The Dalles.

Some time after I saw the "snail," and a most ingenious, successful, detestable engine of destruction it was. The owner had admirably planted it just above the Upper Cascades, on the river, the south bank being at that point almost impassable to the fish. It was placed just where the swift edge of the current makes an inviting eddy, through which the salmon must naturally "run" on their way up stream. Here the current was about eight feet deep. There salmon never swim lower than four feet below the surface. Erected over what would be the entire width of the "run" was a huge frame. Suspended inside this an immense wheel revolved, so adjusted on pulleys as to rise and fall with the changing depth of water. Upon the spokes or arms of this wheel, eight in number, were fastened as many wire nets, each thirty feet in diameter, loose and baggy and movable, resembling in appearance the pouch of a pelican. The current itself is the force which turns the wheel, like an undershot. Very slowly it goes around. The great scoop nets spread lazily around the water, one after another, at just the depth where they are most fatal. Their arms almost pause and float motionless through the stream, But, though slowly, the great wheel, called from this motion the "snail," does move, and with just the right tardiness, for as the nets emerge from the water they are so filled with the struggling prey that Mr. Williams, owner of one of the wheels, pronounced 800 an average catch. At the proper angle above, the net is turned upside down. It contents are dumped along the arm of the wheel to what might be termed its hub, striking which they are rebounded along a trough to the bank. It is a stirring but cruel sight, for there are many small and unmarketable fish in every "haul." The theory is that these are returned to the water and live, but it is like the "returns of the killed and wounded" after a battle—so stunned and mained are they that but few survive. The wheel presents a busy scene, and the profits must be enormous; for the simple contrivance costs about $400, and requires but half a dozen attendants. There are four of these wheels on the river, and a gentleman engaged in the fishing business informed me that the calculation was they caught about half the salmon that go up. There is a wheel on Bradford's Island, above Bonneville, the work of which has become so notorious (not merely killing merchantable fish, but in so doing destroying a dozen times as many of a size as yet too small for commerce) that the public press has demanded its suppression. But all these wheels, as has been said, are the production of a brain which aims to live without work." Probably from 2,500 to 3,000 salmon (for the proprietors of the wheels are very chary about giving actual figures), large and small, are caught every hour, night and day of the week, save from Saturday to Sunday night. Compute the amount. I know of one actual catch of 6,400 salmon in a day—large fish, suitable for the canneries. An experienced fisherman stated it as the result of his observation that about one in ten of those caught were used. Even in the number used, packed and sent down in barrels, one wheel kept the large cannery at Warrendale busy all through the season, and then the cannery couldn't take care of all!

Looking at the descending stream of half dead fish literally "broken on the wheel," I could not but regard the question for a moment in the light of an angler and an economist. Meanwhile, day and night the "barbarous and murderous" (I am using an intelligent fisherman's phrase) "snail" wheel is kept going, and the salmon are literally corralled by millions in the very haunts where they go to bring forth their kind.—New York Letter.
