ASTORIA, OREGON: THURSDAY, OCTOBER 26, 1882

ISSUED EVERY MORNING. J. F. HALLORAN & COMPANY, PUBLISHERS AND PROPRIETORS.

Terms of Subscription: Sent by carrier, per week, 25 cents; by mail, four months, $1.00; by mail, one year, $3.00.

The Gazette is patiently awaiting an opportunity to get over to the Sound.

Inspectors Ward and Lotan are in the city. They go to Tillamook to-morrow.

Singapore is this season among the points to which canned salmon is being shipped.

The Emma Hayward is telegraphed as having arrived safely at Seattle last Tuesday afternoon.

The pile driving at the foot of Cass street goes on uninterruptedly; the new wharf, to be built there, will be a substantial one.

It would require a surgical operation to get a joke into the head of the individual who dishes up the "state news" in the Standard.

A social club is being organized to give a series of soirees this winter. It is a good idea, and deserves substantial encouragement.

J. C. Trullinger has two new boilers at his sawmill, constructed in reference to burning sawdust, which he can hereafter consume.

The Timaru is discharging the wheat she took in last week. The Starbuck is discharging railroad iron.

The Gen. Fairchild arrived in from Wilmington, yesterday. The City of Sparta and Europa crossed out.

The Portland board of trade will elect a member of the board of pilot commissioners this evening.

Quite a village is building up below the foot of Concomly street. A new roadway has been constructed to the canneries, now building below Trullinger's mill.

It is understood, says the Standard, that after the first of the month the San Francisco steamers will leave on Tuesday and Friday of each week and arrive on Wednesdays and Saturdays.

What came near being a case of shanghaiing at Gray's dock last Tuesday night, was stopped by the appearance of two men, who, hearing the cries of the victim, demanded to know what the trouble was.

Nearly every issue of THE ASTORIAN, now, contains one or more letters from parties living in different parts of this and adjoining counties.

Verily opposition is the life of trade—and sometimes more so. Passengers are being carried between Seattle and Whatcom for 50 cents each, and freight for 50 cents per ton.

After Oct. 31st, we will not deliver Daily Oregonians in this city, as we have sold this right to Mr. E. C. Holden.

We'll bet a big red apple that freight for merchants is not carried past its destination by those boats.

We learn from A. M. Johnson & Co. that their pure ground Java Coffee is a pronounced success and is meeting with large sales.

Without mineral water, fresh and sparkling, at F. B. Elbertson's.

Railroad Notes

St. Helens, Or., Oct. 23, 1882. EDITOR ASTORIAN.

The Northern Pacific railroad company has extended its survey from Portland to Kalama on the south side of the Columbia river.

Mr. Watt, agent for the company, has secured the right of way from this place to the mouth of Tide creek, opposite to Kalama.

He has had no difficulty thus far in adjusting the damage, and the owners of land along the line have found him disposed to pay all the property was worth.

A preliminary survey has been made from the mouth of Tide creek to Coffin rock, a distance of about three miles; but it is not yet known where the crossing will be.

Work will be commenced on the line so soon as a sufficient amount of the right of way has been secured.

The prospects now are that within one year the road will be completed.

Carrying Freight Past

I agree with "Omnia," that something should be done in freeing ourselves from the oppressive exactions and discriminations made by the O. R. & N. Co., and think the opposition steamship idea a good one.

I have this plan to propose: At the next meeting of the chamber of commerce let a committee be appointed to get full figures in regard to such a steamship, probable cost, probable amount of business from freight and passengers, profits, etc., etc.

Let this committee report at a special meeting. I am sure that with the feeling as it is here to-day, the stock ought to be subscribed.

Where the Trouble Is

Oregon papers announce the arrival of the new and powerful tug Pioneer from Philadelphia via San Francisco, but still complain of detentions in crossing the bar.

It is said that there is enough water on the bar, but the delay is now charged to the tugs. Four large ships off the bar for days, with pilots aboard, is not a very encouraging state of affairs.

There is evidently something wrong somewhere. It can hardly be that ships are considered safer outside than inside.

The trouble is with the bar itself. There is not the depth of water that there should be, nor will there be, till the bar is improved by the United States government.

Log of the Wilna

ASTORIA, Oct. 25th 1882. Report of ship Wilna, from New York, March 10th, via St. Thomas, June 3d, 1882.

Sailed from St. Thomas June 3d, 1882. July 8th, lat. 5 deg. 18 min. north, long. 22 deg. 17 min. west, was in collision with the French bark Dux Frieres, lost jibboom, part of stem, and all head gear.

Arrived off Columbia river bar Oct. 17th. S. SIMMONS, Master.

Gray's Harbor

A correspondent at Hoquiam writes to the Olympia Transcript: Times are pretty lively here now. The mill works very well. They are engaged in putting up buildings—residences, etc., for employes—store building for the company, and an additional 150 feet to the mill.

Two steamers from Astoria and a lumber vessel are expected every day.

Consumption in its early stages is readily cured by the use of Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery," though, if the lungs are wasted no medicine will effect a cure.

Notice: After Oct. 31st, we will not deliver Daily Oregonians in this city, as we have sold this right to Mr. E. C. Holden.

Remarks of J. H. Mitchell

In the course of his speech at Salem last Friday evening, immediately after J. N. Dolph's election, Mr. Mitchell said: "No political party can live unless the principle that the will of the majority in such party is to be upheld as the supreme law in all its practical workings."

That is the principle upon which all representative governments rest for their security and stability, and by its faithful observance and strict enforcement alone, can republican governments be maintained and perpetuated; and what is true in this respect of a representative government is equally true of any political party.

Abandon this fundamental idea, and any government or any party becomes unstable, insecure and worthless; and its organization precarious in the extreme, the plaything of dangerous and unreasoning faction and little less than absolute mockery.

In such cases the minority—the few—upon any pretense, whether well or ill founded, become the masters, the arrogant bosses—the dictators of party policy and action, while the majority—the many—are held in subservient obedience to the arbitrary and aristocratic will of the former.

The inauguration of such a rule in the organization of any party is, in my opinion, fatally dangerous, not only to the well-being, but fraught with imminent peril to its very existence.

It has been charged that I have arrogated to myself in the politics of this state, and in this campaign unwarranted prerogatives, that I or my friends have made claims that I was the only man who could properly represent the state.

No such claim has ever been made by me or any true friend of mine, and the statement that any such claim is, or ever has been made, is the bold, untruthful, unsupported charge of personal and political enemies; and I here and now submit to this large and intelligent audience, to this legislature, and all the people of the state whether throughout this campaign, I have done aught that should rightfully subject me to such a charge.

And now, in conclusion, I desire to thank most cordially all these friends, both members of the legislature, Republicans as well as Democrats, and the many others, not members, who have given me their hearty, faithful and persistent support during all the weary days of this ever-to-be-remembered contest.

I shall, during all the years of my life, and until my feet shall find rest in the silent grave, remember your great partiality and kindness, your generous confidence and trust, with feelings of profound appreciation and tender regard.

The Latest Wriggle

A New York letter says the weddings of to-day are of the most complicated character. Sometimes there are as many as six different pieces of pasteboard, each one in its separate envelope, all enclosed in a large one.

The sorting out of this mass of cards shows, first, the names of the father and mother of the bride; then of the parents of the groom. Then comes the bride's card separate as Miss —, and that of the groom. Next the invitation to the marriage ceremony, and another card stating when Mr. and Mrs. — are to be at home.

The last stationery lead which breaks the camel's back is the card of the clergyman who is to marry the people.
